Bug man

Kids love to learn about bugs, and Ken Lyon is just the man to teach them. Ken, an electrical engineer at EG&G, is an amateur entomologist. On Tuesday, he visited Mrs. Jones' kindergarten classes at the Woburn Street School to show his insect collection.

Library trustees deny censorship charge

by Arlene Surprenant

A majority of Wilmington library trustees said last night (Tuesday) that the library's handling of two hazing reports did not constitute censorship.

Anne Linehan had claimed that Library Director Phillip Meriam censored the reports by accepting them and putting them on library shelves then removing them at the direction of trustee chairman Pat Duggan. Linehan said she had bought and donated the public documents to the library because it was important for people to read them and make their own decision regarding the controversial issue.

Linehan appeared before the board of trustees Tuesday night to seek assurance that censorship would not be tolerated at the library. She also made several requests of the board. These included posting the Library Bill of Rights in a prominent place, making public information available in the Public Documents section of the library, updating the library rules and regulations and its book selection policy, and making library minutes, policies, and procedures available on request.

Acting chairman James Banda led the discussion. After listening to Linehan reference the Bill of Rights and point out that materials should not be removed "because of partisan or doctrinal disapproval," Banda maintained, "we did nothing wrong." He added Duggan's decision to keep the reports off the shelves was "proper" because they did not come from the school committee, which is the normal channel.

Duggan said she did not censor the document nor refer to it as political. She maintained that was political was the way the library was being "used," with reports being brought in a week before the recall election.

Trustee Ken Miller said he didn't have enough information to make a decision, but no one moved to enlighten him on the events which occurred in January. All agreed with Banda that "hazing back then was a dirty word" as well as an emotional and controversial issue. When Linehan asked Banda if he had read the document, he said, "I have never read the report because I don't want to read it."

Trustee Larry Flaherty told Linehan, "to label it censorship is a bit much." He did agree there was a need to change library policy to address the issue. Fellow board member Martha Stevenson said, while she was unsure if the action taken constituted censorship, it was time to take steps to assure that a similar situation doesn't arise in the future.

As the discussion escalated with no real resolution, Banda moved on to Linehan's requests.

The only request the board agreed to act on in the near future was a review and possible update of the library's rules and regulations, which had been penned in 1973, and the book selection policy, which had been written in 1986.

Though the trustees accepted a framed copy of the Library Bill of Rights, they did not agree to hang it in the library. Banda pointed to a lack of wall space and noted this could set a precedent for other residents or groups wishing to hang material in the building. In fact, anyone wishing to post announcements or notices in the library may hang them on a bulletin board by the back door, with staff permission. Banda added both the Bill of Rights and the library's policy are available upon request. When Linehan tried to pin the board down to a time frame for acting on her request, the trustees sidestepped the issue leading Linehan to call the whole discussion "ludicrous."

Board members refused to be drawn into discussion on the rest of the requests, saying only they would review them later when a full board was present. Flaherty did say putting minutes and attachments from all town boards in the library would require a new section and more staff. Banda noted the minutes of town boards are available at the Town Clerk's office.

The board thanked Linehan for bringing the matters before them. "It's our job as trustees to hear this," said Stevenson.

Linehan reminded the board, "you are merely the trustees and that means the trust of the people."

Two selected in housing lottery

by Arlene Surprenant

Two single moms were the top winners in Thursday's lottery for two units in an affordable duplex on Silverhurst Avenue.

Diane Martin of Lowell and Gerianne Lydon of Bedford were the lucky winners out of a pool of seven applicants. Two of the applicants were placed in the minority category and five were in local preference, which covers Wilmington residents, former residents, and town employees. All of the names were drawn during Thursday's meeting of the Wilmington Housing Partnership. In case the two winners don't meet the bank's financial requirements to buy the home, the next two names on the list will be eligible.

Martin and several other applicants were in the audience when the lottery got underway.

Lydon wasn't in attendance. Martin expressed disbelief when her name was read.

"I'm just stunned. I never won anything," Martin told the Town Crier.

Martin grew up in Wilmington and was educated in the town's public school system. She currently rents an apartment in Lowell because she couldn't afford to stay in Wilmington.

"It broke my heart to move away. This is like an answered prayer," said Martin.

Martin found out about the lottery through her sister, who read about it in this paper.

The duplex is currently under construction and is expected to be completed by the end of May. The price of each unit is an affordable $87,250. Thomas Realty Trust worked together with the Partnership in developing the duplex.

School committee okays $12.9m budget

by Arlene Surprenant

There was no dissension and little discussion as members of the Wilmington School Committee unanimously approved a $12.9 million budget for FY 1994 last week. Though Supt. Geraldine O'Donnell recommended 11 staff positions be cut to fund the budget, the focus, as in the previous week's budget subcommittee meeting, was on the positive and providing the best education possible for the money.

Dr. O'Donnell recommended the cuts be made in order to concentrate on improving the core curriculum. To do that, the superintendent suggested the following be done over a period of time: create a stronger writing program, implement the "new" math and the use of more manipulatives, provide more hands-on learning in science and greater multi-cultural awareness in social studies, develop more creative and critical thinking, and make the libraries the backbone of each school. In addition, the superintendent proposed upgrading computer equipment, replacing outdated textbooks and buying more supplies, completing the elementary reading program, instituting a long range technology plan, and installing a Macintosh computer lab at the high school.

Dr. O'Donnell said alot of what she is proposing is part of her "vision" for the system. Her goal, she said, was to develop more independent thinkers. The superintendent told the committee, while she was impressed with the teaching staff, she was concerned about inconsistencies she saw in the system and only "pockets of excellence."

The following staff cuts were recommended for next year: an assistant principal position, which is currently vacant; one secretary; one, guidance counselor; one foreign language teacher; two home economics teachers; three industrial arts instructors; one physical education teacher; and one educational assistant. Dr. O'Donnell said she plans to put a full time librarian in each of the middle schools and to work on alternatives to compensate for the loss of the positions.

School committeeman Brad Jackson praised the budget process and the shift in focus from staff reductions to system priorities. The only concerns raised were on reductions at the middle school level and a $7,000 line item for student physicals.

The budget will next go before the Wilmington Finance Committee on March 18. The school board will hold its own budget hearing before their April 14 meeting.

Wilmington weathers a wet, wild weekend

by Arlene Surprenant

Sixteen inches of snow fell over the weekend in Wilmington as town departments worked round the clock to respond to emergencies and keep the roads clear.

Residents, for the most part, heeded warnings to stay indoors. Not so employees with the Department of Public Works and the police and fire departments, who were out in force.

Department heads followed emergency procedure in beefing up shifts and utilizing extra equipment and vehicles at their disposal. The police and fire departments set up a contingency plan in case of power outages. Fire Chief Dan Stewart stationed a fire truck at the DPW building and brought a back-up ambulance and fire alarm truck to the fire station to help with downed wires. Extra police cruisers were visible on local streets to aid stranded motorists, according to Lt. Robert LaRivee. Police also checked up on elderly residents who live alone while the fire and police chiefs used WCTV to keep residents abreast of the storm.

Sixteen emergency calls were logged at the fire station beginning at 11:30 a.m. Saturday. Most of those were ambulance runs but two were car accidents, one was a chimney fire at Federal Street, and one a car fire on Concord Street. A DPW vehicle accompanied fire emergency vehicles on all calls to clear out hydrants and provide access, said Chief Stewart.

"Our biggest fear was loss of electricity," said Lt. LaRivee. However, that fear failed to materialize and police, by and large, ended up with few if any real emergencies.

Most of the work during the height of the blizzard fell to the 29 employees called in to work Saturday and Sunday by DPW Supt. Bob Palmer. Palmer said he called in his crew 11:30 a.m. Saturday and the last employee left at 3 p.m. Sunday. Throughout the storm, a total of 52 DPW vehicles and outside plows responded to the emergency. On Monday, a clean-up operation, which included the use of two small riding vehicles to clear 24 miles of sidewalks, was underway.

Palmer said, because of a fear of downed power lines and shortages of electricity, two officials from Reading Light stayed at the DPW building with him until Sunday afternoon. He added only one street, Hanover Street, lost power for a brief time.

During the storm, the town's emergency management crew standing by in the basement of the old Town Hall. Deputy Fire Chief Walter Sowyrda is emergency management director. He is assisted by a half dozen people, including some ham radio operators. The communications team maintained a hookup with state emergency management headquarters in Framingham.

This latest in a season of snowstorms has left Wilmington's snow and ice account in the red.

"We went into the storm in the black (but) we're broke now. There's no question about it," laughed Palmer. He said he has fingers crossed that Governor William Weld comes through with some financial assistance.

And just how well did Wilmington weather the storm?

"We lucked out," summed up Larivee.

"Not bad at all for the type of storm we had," said Palmer who gave much of the credit to town employees.

"The whole thing was very well coordinated," said Dan Stewart. In the future, he added, he would like to see Wilmington's cable station WCTV included in emergency planning.

No mail? Put out a box

The Blizzard of '93, so called, has left about 1000 Wilmington postal customers without mail delivery.

Wilmington Postmaster Jake Quinn said that the high snowbanks are blocking access to residents' mailboxes. Anyone who is unable to clear a drive-up access to their mailbox should put out a temporary receptacle.

Delivery customers cannot pick up their mail at the post office because their mail is not there. Since the mail routes no longer originate at the Wilmington Post Office, undelivered mail does not return there. It goes out again with the carrier the next day, who will again attempt to deliver it. Carriers will deliver mail to temporary boxes.

WCTV aids local school

by Arlene Surprenant

WCTV is looking toward the future. On Friday, the local cable station assisted a nearby school in producing an educational program sent out via satellite to 200 towns in Massachusetts as well as other states.

The catalyst for local involvement with "My Town: Invention, Convention" was Wilmington resident Sandra Curtin. Curtin is a member of WCTV and co-produces "In Pursuit of Excellence" with Cheryl Soderquist. She also teaches computers at St. Augustine's in Andover and interned since September with MCET (Massachusetts Corporation for Educational Telecommunications), an interactive educational television corporation based in Cambridge. Friday's program allowed students from both Marlboro and Andover to explain their own inventions to a broad television audience and take questions from students in Massachusetts and other states from as far away as Virginia.

When the Andover cable station refused to handle the MCET program, Curtin went to WCTV. General Manager Sam Schauerma for help. Schauerma agreed to provide technology, hardware, and a crew to televise the program in Wilmington.

On Friday, MCET sent an $800,000 van fully equipped with a control room inside and a satellite dish on its roof over to the cable studio. The van became the intermediary to hook up WCTV with Cambridge, said Curtin. About 10 of the 56 Andover and Tewksbury students got to explain their inventions, which ranged from a jello flavored tongue depressor to a hat equipped with a buzzer to awaken sleepy drivers. The students were accompanied by fifth grade teachers Paul O'Day from Andover and Joanne Poulin from Wilmington. The show was televised at 1 p.m. as cameras cut between Wilmington and Cambridge. Assisting in the production were Curtin, who acted as floor director; Soderquist, director; Carolyn Thorne, assistant floor director; Chet Soderquist and Joe McCarthy, cameramen; and Paul Ortalano, on audio.

Curtin is excited about the possibilities if Wilmington's Superintendent of Schools follows through on her promise to look into subscribing to educational programming for local schools. To do that, money will have to be forthcoming, possibly through a grant, and a satellite dish would have to be installed on the high school roof, said Curtin. The Shawsheen School and the North

Intermediate School are both cable ready for hook up. Future programs could go through WCTV and be broadcast on channel 52.

Schauerma supports the concept and says he is ready to offer the use of the station, provided his directors agree.

"I think it's a wonderful program from what I've seen of it. I would like to see it happen," said the manager.

Curtin estimates interactive television has been in existence for about three years. The educational programs produced through MCET focus on administrators, teachers, students, parents, and families. For example, one program focused on last year's riots in Los Angeles and allowed students in that city to answer questions posed by Boston school children.

"There's alot that can be done. This is up and coming," said Curtin, adding Friday's experience "was a thrill, especially for the kids and the crew."

Besides expanding a student's educational horizon, education by satellite is also a challenge for local access stations like WCTV.

"This is just another example of the capabilities of our studio," concluded Curtin.

Designing underway on Rt. 62 bridge

by Arlene Surprenant

The Burlington Avenue (Rt. 62) bridge project in Wilmington Town Center is out of the planning stage and into the design phase. The project is also on the 1993 TIP (Transportation Improvement Program) for state and federal funding, according to Michael Matt, executive director of the Wilmington Redevelopment Authority.

Matt told this paper the design stage will take a minimum of two years to complete. When its finished, the state will hold a public hearing on the project. Plans call for replacing the bridge, widening approaches to the bridge, and improving the Rte.38-62 intersection.

Plumbers meet at Shawsheen Tech

Whether or not copper tubing in a home was defective or installed improperly was one of the knotty problems addressed last week by members of the Mass. Board of Examiners of Plumbers and Gas Fitters. The group met at Shawsheen Tech choosing this site for their monthly meeting, and therefore creating a classroom in action for Tech students studying to be plumbers.

"The group met here last month at our request," said plumbing instructor Jim Sullivan. Allowing students to see the process was the impetus of the request from Sullivan and members of Shawsheen's Plumbing Program advisory, a group of local industry reps who advise the school on equipment and curriculum.

The state plumbing board approves products, revokes licenses, listens to appeals of local decisions, and grants variances. The nine members represent specific jobs and fields, and include master and journeyman plumbers and gas fitters, a sanitary engineer, the commissioner of public health, a gas fitter versed in liquid petroleum gas, the commissioner of public safety, and a rep of the public, according to Sullivan.

Both Sullivan and Anthony Bazzinotti, director of the Tech's programs, believe the experience was valuable to the future plumbers at Shawsheen.

HOME OFFICE PLUS AND MINUS

Most people who work from a bona fide office at home are well aware of the tax advantages: the deductions for direct business expenses like equipment plus furniture, painting and decoration of the space used as an office; and the indirect expenses, the portion of taxes, upkeep and maintenance and even depreciation that can be deducted in the same ratio as the office space to total space in the home.

Another bonus of working at home: the cost of travel from home to other work locations is not commuting, the Tax Court has ruled, but qualifies as deductible travel.

The only down side is that, when you sell your home, the gain on the home-office part of the house is taxable. There are a couple of ways around this, though. The gain is not taxable if business use ceases before the year the house is sold. Another out is to use the office space for personal use, too, which "violates" the restrictions on home office and so disqualifies a home-business deduction.

DARE graduation

Wilmington fifth graders recently completed the DARE (Drug Abuse Resistance Education) program. Woburn Street School fifth graders received their certificates, hats and t-shirts in ceremonies at the school last Tuesday. Above, they are shown singing the DARE song.

WCTV aids local school

by Arlene Surprenant

WCTV is looking toward the future. On Friday, the local cable station assisted a nearby school in producing an educational program sent out via satellite to 200 towns in Massachusetts as well as other states.

The catalyst for local involvement with "My Town: Invention, Convention" was Wilmington resident Sandra Curtin. Curtin is a member of WCTV and co-produces "In Pursuit of Excellence" with Cheryl Soderquist. She also teaches computers at St. Augustine's in Andover and interned since September with MCET (Massachusetts Corporation for Educational Telecommunications), an interactive educational television corporation based in Cambridge. Friday's program allowed students from both Marlboro and Andover to explain their own inventions to a broad television audience and take questions from students in Massachusetts and other states from as far away as Virginia.

When the Andover cable station refused to handle the MCET program, Curtin went to WCTV General Manager Sam Schauerman for help. Schauerman agreed to provide technology, hardware, and a crew to televise the program in Wilmington. On Friday, MCET sent an $800,000 van fully equipped with a control room inside and a satellite dish on its roof over to the cable studio. The van became the intermediary to hook up WCTV with Cambridge, said Curtin. About 10 of the 56 Andover and Tewksbury students got to explain their inventions, which ranged from a jello flavored tongue depressor to a hat equipped with a buzzer to awaken sleepy drivers. The students were accompanied by fifth grade teachers Paul O'Day from Andover and Joanne Poulin from Wilmington. The show was televised at 1 p.m. as cameras cut between Wilmington and Cambridge. Assisting in the production were Curtin, who acted as floor director; Soderquist, director; Carolyn Thorne, assistant floor director; Chet Soderquist and Joe McCarthy, cameramen; and Paul Ortalano, on audio.

Curtin is excited about the possibilities if Wilmington's Superintendent of Schools follows through on her promise to look into subscribing to educational programming for local schools. To do that, money will have to be forthcoming, possibly through a grant, and a satellite dish would have to be installed on the high school roof, said Curtin. The Shawsheen School and the North

Intermediate School are both cable ready for hook up. Future programs could go through WCTV and be broadcast on channel 52.

Schauerman supports the concept and says he is ready to offer the use of the station, provided his directors agree.

"I think it's a wonderful program from what I've seen of it. I would like to see it happen," said the manager.

Curtin estimates interactive television has been in existence for about three years. The educational programs produced through MCET focus on administrators, teachers, students, parents, and families. For example, one program focused on last year's riots in Los Angeles and allowed students in that city to answer questions posed by Boston school children.

"There's alot that can be done. This is up and coming," said Curtin, adding Friday's experience "was a thrill, especially for the kids and the crew."

Besides expanding a student's educational horizon, education by satellite is also a challenge for local access stations like WCTV.

"This is just another example of the capabilities of our studio," concluded Curtin.

Designing underway on Rt. 62 bridge

by Arlene Surprenant

The Burlington Avenue (Rt. 62) bridge project in Wilmington Town Center is out of the planning stage and into the design phase. The project is also on the 1993 TIP (Transportation Improvement Program) for state and federal funding, according to Michael Matt, executive director of the Wilmington Redevelopment Authority. Matt told this paper the design stage will take a minimum of two years to complete. When its finished, the state will hold a public hearing on the project. Plans call for replacing the bridge, widening approaches to the bridge, and improving the Rte.38-62 intersection.

Plumbers meet at Shawsheen Tech

Whether or not copper tubing in a home was defective or installed improperly was one of the knotty problems addressed last week by members of the Mass. Board of Examiners of Plumbers and Gas Fitters. The group met at Shawsheen Tech choosing this site for their monthly meeting, and therefore creating a classroom in action for Tech students studying to be plumbers.

"The group met here last month at our request," said plumbing instructor Jim Sullivan. Allowing students to see the process was the impetus of the request from Sullivan and members of Shawsheen's Plumbing Program advisory, a group of local industry reps who advise the school on equipment and curriculum.

The state plumbing board approves products, revokes licenses, listens to appeals of local decisions, and grants variances. The nine members represent specific jobs and fields, and include master and journeyman plumbers and gas fitters, a sanitary engineer, the commissioner of public health, a gas fitter versed in liquid petroleum gas, the commissioner of public safety, and a rep of the public, according to Sullivan.

Both Sullivan and Anthony Bazzinotti, director of the Tech's programs, believe the experience was valuable to the future plumbers at Shawsheen.

It's YOUR Money

HOME OFFICE PLUS AND MINUS

Most people who work from a bona fide office at home are well aware of the tax advantages; the deductions for direct business expenses like equipment plus furniture, painting and decoration of the space used as an office; and the indirect expenses, the portion of taxes, upkeep and maintenance and even depreciation that can be deducted in the same ratio as the office space to total space in the home.

Another bonus of working at home: the cost of travel from home to other work locations is not commuting, the Tax Court has ruled, but qualifies as deductible travel.

The only down side is that, when you sell your home, the gain on the home-office part of the house is taxable. There are a couple of ways around this, though. The gain is not taxable if business use ceases before the year the house is sold. Another out is to use the office space for personal use, too, which "violates" the restrictions on home office and so disqualifies a home-business deduction.

frankly speaking

by Kevin John Sowyrda

It's no wonder that 'Falling Down,' starring Michael Douglas, has quickly become a box office hit. The Warner Brothers flick portrays the ultimate expression of middleclass frustration through Douglas' serial character who starts to literally shoot up his home city after reaching the breaking point over such daily nuisances as traffic and the local Burger King not serving breakfast any time after 11. "Have it your way" is a thing of the past I guess.

There's a reason why people are flocking to this one. Most will refrain from pulling out their semiautomatics when they hit a jam on 38 or miss that Egg McMuffin deadline. But to a man and woman, America relates to the movie's message that our days are frustrated by an infrastructure that doesn't work, a government that robs us blind, jobs, if we've got 'em, that don't pay enough to save spit, quality in products that's not there and a general decline in the standard of living that's finally given new, real meaning to the cliché, "the good old days."

What ever happened to them is a topic for another piece but this near breaking point electoral temper should be tapped into by whatever savvy contemporary politicians are left.

At the national level Ross Perot was smart enough and his throw-the-baby-out-with-the-bath-water message earned him one in five votes. Bill Clinton was even more savvy, managing to attack the same institution of government to which he's belonged for more than a decade. His message earned him the Oval Office.

Shocking as it may seem, these lessons of politics apply to the earthly environs of municipal government as well. Local candidates who dare reach into the abyss of voter anger and at least appear to empathize with the downtrodden middle class will attract a following. Candidates with the guts to specify their solutions might even win.

In Wilmington there is the usual abundance of fatiguing, anemic generalities from candidates. Some of the garden variety pledges were to be "totally independent," filled with "knowledge and experience" and "willing to listen."

But the voters are looking for more this year. The typical "commitment to" and "determination to" just won't do. While inadequate government has become staple Americana, some are keeping hope alive that a candidate might come around the corner, perhaps even in Wilmington and Tewksbury, with something better than the same, old drivél.

Briefly in Politics...

Remember that nasty, old recall election. Perhaps the most ugly consequence was that candidates were required to submit campaign finance reports documenting their expenditures. These are some of the more tedious political chores politicians face and most wait until the absolute deadline to submit their finance summaries.

According to Wilmington Town Clerk Kay Scanton candidates faced the same requirements in the special election as they would normally in the annual municipal race. All of the candidates have met the deadline but only one report had any meat to it.

Shirley Callan said her legal expenses for the race have reached a whopping $1,200. The school committeewoman who bested Bob Surran in the February 2 election said she also spent $500 for a stenographer to record a meeting of Wilmington election officials. Callan and her legal counsel unsuccessfully appealed the legitimacy of the recall election to the local board of voter registrars.

Callan had impressive financial backing, receiving a $500.00 contribution from former high school faculty member Ken Palm.

As for the other candidates, Linda McMenimen reported no fundraising and modest expenditures on postage totaling under $300.00. Suzy Cushing Rooney reported $784.35 in total expenditures and Bob Surran $952.00.

...There was a time when Bruce MacDonald was the board of appeals and the board of appeals was Bruce MacDonald. A veteran to local government, MacDonald served as an associate member of the board when he was in college and sponsored for membership by then Selectman Wavie Drew. He later served as a selectman from 1969 to 1971 and ultimately "retired" to the appeals board and firmly held the gavel for 22 years.

It was more reality than perception that MacDonald's vote was key for the construction of your new garage or that addition to the family homestead.

Viewed by the politically naive as a sleeper board dealing with such mundane issues, the board is in fact a base for political power and influence. If you don't think so, just check with those who've been denied their zoning appeals and have painfully appreciated the prerogative of the board.

But last year MacDonald was ousted from his appeals board roost when the selectmen failed to reappoint him to another term, a vote which for years had been completely routine. Speculation was that MacDonald's crime was voting against projects affecting one of the selectmen. Others made the off-the-record comment that MacDonald had ruled the appeals board like his own fiefdom for too long and that selectmen were weary of arbitrary decisions based on old friendships and political cronyism.

Today, in a surprise move, MacDonald has requested reinstatement, just one week after he publicly endorsed selectman candidate Diane Allan. Selectmen who opposed MacDonald last year are in a quandary as their ranks appear to be breaking. Town hall sources have said that Selectman Dan Ballou will be the deciding vote on MacDonald's return and that the retiring board member may reverse himself and support MacDonald this year.

Selectmen Bob Cain and Mark Haldane will need to swing their colleague back to his usual place with the majority if MacDonald is to be kept in retirement. "He (MacDonald) has two votes with Bruce and Duggan," a source told this writer. "But it seems like Ballou is willing to let MacDonald return."

In an interview on Tuesday, MacDonald said he would not discuss any details concerning his reappointment until after the selectmen have made their decision. MacDonald's only comment was, "I have a genuine desire to return to public service so that I can give something back to my community as I have in the past."

letters to the editor

Dear Larz:
This letter has to be one of many written in response to your headline story "MacDonald to return to board?"

Bruce MacDonald epitomizes the reason for term limits on politicians.

We need people on the appeals board who have political aspirations and do favors for their cronies - NOT!

Sincerely,
Frank Shukis

Dear Larz:
I would like to thank the Wilmington Police and Fire Departments and the ambulance crew for their fast response to our call for help when we were in need.

We are also grateful to all of Bill's friends for their contributions to the United Methodist Church in his memory.

The March 21, 1968 edition of the Town Crier of Wilmington noted that:

New members of the WHS National Honor Society included: Beth Emery, Marcella Gubellini, Bonnie Gamble, Norma McPhee, and Paula Cone, Edward Thomas, Barbara Nelson, Diane Johnson, Jane Emery, Richard Lyford, Gary Nelson, Diane Scaro and Jonathan Wolff.

The home of Dominic Corella, off Clark Street was pictured about ready to float off as a mail truck operated by Joseph Woods Jr., passed by. Other areas effected by the spring flood included Wildwood Street, Federal Street and Clark Street.

According to Nosey Nancy who in 1968 lived on Floradale Avenue, the weather had been so bad and the water so deep that there were wild ducks swimming around in her side yard.

Also according to Nancy, Audrey and Pop Murray of Wildwood Street just returned home from visiting their son Harold who was stationed in Norfolk, Va.

Madelyn McKee was pictured as she picked up the gavel, probably the first lady in the state to serve as chairman of a planning board. Past Chairman Danny Gillis presented the gavel to Mrs. McKee.

Winners of the 1968 Science Fair at WHS who were scheduled to exhibit at the Lowell Science Technology Fair included: David Mahoney, Celia Pushee, Shem Krey, Richard Lyford, David Roberts, Patricia Sullivan, Philip Krey, Jane Emery, Jeanne Laquidara, Philip Guzlef, Susan Keane, George Castaldo, Sylvia Kemp, Ed Thomas, Al Cuoco, Terry Silver, Justine Amicangali, and Paul Coolidge.

Best project in their field - slide rule awards were presented to David Mahoney, Richard Lyford and David Roberts.

Lucci's advertised: twin pack chickens for 29 cents a pound; imported fresh sliced ham, $1.29 cents a pound and blade, cube or face rump steak, 98 cents a pound.

Elia's market offered smoke shoulders, 39 cents a pound; pork loins, 59 cents a pound and Tenderleaf tea bags 69 cents a hundred.

WILMINGTON

The March 16, 1983 edition of the Town Crier of Wilmington noted that:

Several members of the board of selectmen were giving consideration to the proposal to use the Wildwood School as the town hall. School Committeeman Lester White said that while he agreed with the proposed future use of some public buildings, he strongly disagreed with the timing.

Candidate for selectman, Bob Doucette advertised that he was strongly in favor of water purification and conservation; the quality of household water should be improved and industry should recycle and conserve water.

Raymond Durling, a senior at Wilmington High School received a nomination for the US Air Force Academy from Sen. Paul Tsongas.

Wilmington Grange was about to celebrate its 76th anniversary, and seeking larger membership advised those interested to call Mary Howard.

North Intermediate student Michael LaCava was pictured having makeup applied by a member of the Spotlighters. Students would present "Coming of Age."

A plan to repair the ailing Ames Pond dam in conjunction with the construction of a high tech office park off North Street was presented to the planning board. The board was reluctant to issue a needed special permit without a stipulation that the dam be fixed.

Selectman Paul Sullivan announced that he would hold monthly office hours at the town hall.

Cpl Michael Grower was awarded a good conduct medal while serving with the 3rd Marine Aircraft Wing at El Toro, Calif. Jeffrey Rondeau was undergoing recruit training at the Naval Training Station, Great Lakes, Ill.

Selectmen were told by a representative of Heartland that a traffic consulting firm had been retained to prepare a solution to the congestion resulting from vehicles entering and exiting the Heartland Store parking lot.

A proposal for the installation of a 16 inch water main from Catamount Road to Andover Street was under consideration.

Cape Cod dreaming

by George R. Allan

Enough of this snow and a winter that won't end. Let's think about something that conjures up an image of warmth - Cape Cod. My favorite place in August. Many of us who spend time there, however, don't realize how fragile its ecosystem is, particularly the water supply.

The lifeblood of the Cape is water - the water that surrounds it and the water that lies under the sand. Geologically, the Cape was created when the glaciers receded north leaving behind sand, gravel, boulders and kettle ponds. Time, winds, ocean currents and man have further carved up the peninsula to what it is now.

All the Cape's drinking water comes from one large aquifer that extends as much as 2,500 feet down to bedrock. In some areas the fresh water is only 200 feet deep and floats on a lens of denser sea water. The entire Cape is basically one aquifer. It depends on the 45 inches of precipitation that falls on the land surface to replenish the aquifer. Think of it as a beach pail filled with sand. Everything that finds its way on to our into the sand winds up in the aquifer and has a potential of being drawn into the dozens of municipal wells that dot the landscape.

Potential sources of contamination include failing septic systems, leaking underground fuel storage tanks, landfills, and uncontrolled development. But the biggest threat to the Cape's groundwater is Otis Air Force Base. From the 1940s to the 1970s, millions of gallons of fuels, solvents and degreasers leached into the water table. The contamination is one of the worst of the 100 such bases on EPA's Superfund list. The creeping contamination from the base is threatening homes and wells in Mashpee and Falmouth. The plume of poisons is three fourths of a mile wide and two miles long.

A typical rate of horizontal movement through the aquifer is only about one foot per day toward the sea. Rainfall that landed on the airbase in 1940 will take another 50 years to reach Nantucket Sound. Contaminants will likewise take as long to reach the ocean.

Typically, years ago when landfills and sewage treatment plants were constructed, they were located inland away from the high priced oceanfront property. In these areas, the ground and water table are higher and usually upgradient from municipal wells. The threat of contamination now looms over several drinking water supplies.

The Cape's beaches are often the final destination of inland pollutants and the effect on clamming has been dramatic. The acres of clambeds closed by pollution have increased from 400 acres in 1970 to 6,000 acres in 1990. Several years ago, a local beach was closed because of fecal bacteria contamination from cottages along the beach. Many of the Cape's 300 ponds have experienced algae blooms because of overdevelopment.

Because the Cape is a single aquifer, and a spill in one town can move slowly but relentlessly toward the water supply in neighboring towns, the Cape Cod Commission was approved by the voters in 1990. It provides a broad approach to environmental and economic policies. Large development projects are now evaluated on how they affect not only the immediate area, but also the region.

The impacts of issues such as traffic, sewage disposal, solid waste and water supply need to be assessed before a project is approved.

There are 200,000 year round residents on the Cape. During the summer the population swells to 500,000. Everyone who lives or visits there needs to know how fragile and vulnerable the aquifer is to contamination. This fresh water will determine the future of a vacationland that is surrounded by salt water.

English students take a whirl on the stage

by Arlene Surprenant
Excitement is building at Wilmington High. Students stretch out in their seats. Some study scripts while others whisper together, practice parts, or confer with teacher Mathew Joyce.

The students are all from Joyce's Advanced World Lit class. They are in rehearsal for their April 29 production "Life and Language: The Light and the Dark."

The play will include excerpts from popular movies and plays like Rain Man, Awakenings, and Five Easy Pieces as well as readings from songs, poetry, and original commercials. This is an exercise in cooperative learning. The students readily admit they're doing alot of the learning.

"It's all new to me. I'm really shy but I'm going to have to get over that. This (experience) will help me later on," says Jennifer Esher, who put together the script for her choice, Driving Miss Daisy. In the excerpt she has chosen, she will play Miss Daisy; fellow student Greg Merriman will play her chauffeur Hoke. Besides the actual words, the script includes such things as lighting effects, music, and curtain closings.

"The amount of work — it's more than you first realize," explains Leah Mazzoni. Mazzoni chose to script a campfire scene dealing with stereotypes from Stand By Me. She also is in an original commercial written by fellow student Jill Rogers. The two minute commercial, called "The Librarian," is a dialogue which "will encourage kids to read more and watch less T.V." says Rogers.

Jenn Toce wrote the script for her selection, The Holy Grail. Acting in the excerpt are Steve Greco, Josh Gardener, Ryan Kane, and Jeff Niestepski. Toce says, "practising it will be hard (because) we all have to use English accents."

On this day, the students were asked to bring in their finished scripts to be taped and timed. In two weeks, the thespians will have to have their parts down pat. Then several professional actors will visit the class to help with voice projections and enunciation.

Joyce gives directions to his attentive audience. He explains the need to have their costumes, lighting and sound effects ready for rehearsal. Joyce reiterates the students will have to read through the scripts in the dressing rooms to the side of the Barrows Auditorium to see if any cuts have to be made. Allowances have to be made for one minute introductions to each piece and a fifteen minute intermission. Joyce also covers ticket distribution during school lunch periods. Tickets are on sale not only to the student body but to the public at four dollars apiece. Most of the profits go to scholarship aid and the Senior Class.

The students split up and begin to seriously rehearse. A steady undercurrent of talk begins. Laughter wells up. There's a feeling of all being in this together. And a determination to make family and friends proud.

"Everyone's really excited," says Julie Kane. Her choice from The Breakfast Club reveals how one student deals with pressure to get good grades. She will be joined by four other seniors.

"This is something we're all doing on our own, but our classmates are helping us. In the end you feel proud of yourself," sums up Kane.

The public is encouraged to attend the April 29 production of "Life and Language: the Light and the Dark" at 7:30 p.m. in the Barrows Auditorium. Tickets are on sale for $4.00 apiece.

Leger running for school board

Madeleine Leger has announced her candidacy for a seat on the Wilmington School Committee.

A teacher for the last 16 years, Ms. Leger has guided both regular education and special education students toward attaining their personal best. She was a finalist for a principal's position in Lynn last year.

"I am entering this school committee race because of my concern for the education of the children of Wilmington. We seem to have drifted away from what the goals of a school system should be. As a school committee person, I will make it my first priority to set sound educational policy for the school administration to carry out."

"Because I too walk into a classroom every day and have to meet the needs of children, I understand the tremendous challenges teachers face," said Ms. Leger. "I am committed to providing to school department staff, the tools they need to insure and Salem State College. Ms. Leger holds a BA in elementary education and a masters in early childhood education. She lives at 27 Sheldon Ave.

Ms. Leger has demonstrated her leadership qualities as the acting director of a recreational facility for special needs youngsters and as head teacher of an alternative school for young children. She has been a visiting lecturer at many area organizations including the Merrimack Valley Hospice in Lawrence, Project Cope and Camp Kiwanis in Lynn.

JAZZERCISE Fitness Center
442 Main St., Wilmington • 658-0087

It may not seem like it, but spring and summer are just around the corner. If you've gotten used to hiding under layers and layers of heavy, winter clothing, some classes at the Jazzercise Fitness Center could be just what you need.

Karen DiCecca, the owner of Wilmington's Jazzercise Fitness Center, has been teaching Jazzercise for seven years, and running a fitness center for four. At the Wilmington center, six certified instructors offer Step, Fast & Fit, or traditional Jazzercise at 21 different class times, seven days a week! Most classes consist of 15-25 students, and child care is available during about half of them.

Each Jazzercise class runs 60-65 minutes. Students start with a warm-up period, then 25-35 minutes of aerobics, some muscle-toning exercises, and then the cool down. "A lot of people think they have to be able to dance to do Jazzercise," says Karen. "Not true. It's more like a game of Simon Says. Also, most of our dance routines can be adjusted to accommodate different levels of fitness. The instructor will show you how to modify the movements."

Looking for something a little different for your child's birthday party? Why not try a Jazzercise party at the Fitness Center. The party includes a 30-minutes exercise routine. Karen says they're a real hit!

The Jazzercise Fitness Center sells "Class Tickets." A ticket for 4 classes is $16.00; 8 classes: $28.00; 12 classes: $36.00; Unlimited: $48.00. All tickets expire in 30 days. As a special, "New Students" can buy a month of unlimited visits for $19.93, through March 31.

The Jazzercise Fitness Center is located at 442 Main St., Wilmington. Stop by and pick up a class schedule and remember to "Keep your resolution firm in 1993!"

The electric Solectria Force (foreground) finished third in class at the 1993 Arizona Public Service Solar and Electric 500. It features Solectria's advanced drive system and achieves more than 100 miles on a single charge. The gull winged prototype Solectria Flash (background) finished first for the third consecutive year in the three day Open Ultralight event. Solectria racing is sponsored in part by Quin-T Corporation of Tilton, NH, manufacturer of the insulating papers used in Solectria's electric motors.

Solectria's "winning habit"

Winning is becoming habit forming for Solectria Corporation, a Wilmington manufacturer of electric vehicles and advanced components for solar and electric vehicles. For the second year in a row, Solectria has taken top spots in the Arizona Public Service Solar and Electric 500, held March 5-7 at the Phoenix 500 race track.

Solectria entered two models, the Force, driven by Solectria founder, James Worden and the Force NiCad GT with Ed Tremblay at the wheel. In the 200 km Electric Stock Feature, Worden took first place overall and Tremblay took third place in class. Second place went to Indy car driver Tom Sneva in a Ford Probe. For the third consecutive year Worden, driving Solectria's Flash finished first in the Open Ultralight three day event.

Excessive heat was a major obstacle to overcome in the electric motors which powered Solectria's vehicles to victory. Quin-T Corporation, a Tilton, NH manufacture of insulating papers is a sponsor of Solectria's racing program and provides TufQuin dielectric insulation materials for Solectria's racing and commercially available vehicles. Characteristics of TufQuin which make it ideally suited to successful racing applications include: physical toughness, thermal stability, high thermal conductivity, and the ability to maintain dielectric strength in high humidity. These inorganic based materials also have UL Systems Recognition.

Next up for Solectria is the American Tour de Sol to be run from Boston to Burlington, Vt. May 23-29. Last year, Solectria copped three firsts; first in the American Commuter Division, first in the TDS Commuter Division and first overall.

Dynamics Research Corp. meets revenue goal

Dynamics Research Corporation has announced its revenues rose 5.0 percent to $102.6 million for 1992 and $97.7 million in 1991. Net income rose 10.67 percent to $4.0 million from $3.6 million in 1991 while net income per share rose 14.9 percent to $.77 from $.67 per share a year ago.

The net income for the quarter ending December 26, 1992 rose 28.0 percent to $1.8 million or $.35 per share on a revenue growth of 2.2 percent to $33.4 million.

"One of our goals for 1992 was to top $100 million in sales and we are pleased to report this accomplishment," said Al Rand, president and

"In 1991 we realized the need to market our technological competence, such as data base design, systems engineering and logistic analysis to other federal government agencies outside the Department of Defense.

"During 1992, we applied our data base design competence on a program with the FAA to design a data base for monitoring aging aircraft. We utilized our logistic analysis technology on work performed for the New York Transit Authority in developing a reliability tracking modeling program for new equipment procurement as well as working with the Department of Transportation on a Vehicle Simulation Laboratory.

"The majority of our work in 1992 was with the Department of Defense and we will continue to market this area because our technological expertise is utilized to generate cost savings on defense programs."

Dynamics Research Corporation provides a wide range of specialized technical services to federal government agencies and also manufactures components for industrial measurement and control.

Receiving Re/Max's highest award, the 100 percent Club Award, was Joan Unger, Cathy Lawson, Kathi Donato, and Linda Covino. Linda also won the award for the Top Producer in the office for the second straight year.

Also receiving awards were Dana Singleton and Bill Perkins (Executive Club) and Donna Sullivan, Gary Chinchillo, and Patsy Chinchillo (President's Club). Since the awards are given on an annual basis, people who joined during the year have only a few months to achieve sales levels.

Re/Max Hearthstone Realty is part of Re/Max International, the fastest growing real estate organization in North America. As of this date, Re/Max has over 32,000 full time sales associates. Re/Max's claim to fame is that its associates typically handle three to four times the sales volume of its competitor's agents. It has a formula that attracts veteran salespeople.

"We are very pleased with our sales levels for 1992! says owner Bill Perkins. "It is a real inspiration to work with all top salespeople." Perkins added that so far in 1993, business is even better. "While it is difficult to find enough experienced agents to handle all of the business, even with the 12 we have we should be able to top $50 million in sales this year."

Masked bandit hits N. Wilmington Shell

A masked bandit held up the North Wilmington Shell station last Thursday night for an undisclosed sum of money.

The holdup was reported at 10:52 p.m., just before closing. The bandit held up a knife and demanded money. The attendant complied.

Lt. Robert LaRivee of the Wilmington Police Dept. said the amount taken was small, since most of the evening's receipts had been deposited.

The man was described as a white male, six feet tall, 230 pounds. He was wearing a blue denim jacket, black pants, a hood and a ski mask.

LaRivee said the thief fled on foot. No vehicle was seen.

Radio Shack

The Radio Shack store at Wilmington Plaza was hit by a "smash and grab" thief on Monday night. The thief smashed a plate glass window and took items from the stands near the window. Missing were a police scanner and three camcorders. Police received the call at 10:20 p.m.

Wilmington Housing Partnership approves Buckingham Estates

by Arlene Surprenant

The affordable housing project known as Buckingham Estates has been approved by the Wilmington Housing Partnership. The project will now go before the Board of Selectmen for that board's approval before going to the state and the board of appeals for a comprehensive permit.

The project is being built off Aldrich Road by Thomas Realty Trust. Plans call for 23 or 24 homes, six of which will be affordable. The design was changed to single family homes clustered around three turnarounds to afford more open space, and to reduce the amount of pavement and drainage impact.

On Thursday, Partnership members reviewed the project with developers Linn Anderson and Peter DeGennaro. Anderson informed the board that with the lots currently under their control, the density would be 2.09 units per acre. She said that meant that the project is "less dense than the neighborhood." Neighbors have already had their say in a public hearing on January 14. They voiced concerns not only about the density in the R-60 area, but the impact on their property values and the access through Buckingham Street. They will have another chance to speak on the project when it goes before the board of appeals.

Partnership members discussed the style of the affordable units. They decided on three split gambrel capes, two garrisons, and one handicapped adaptable cape. Anderson said soil tests for the individual septic systems will be done when the snow melts.

Anderson then asked the board if Thomas Realty Trust could assign lots to the town to be held as collateral instead of posting a bond to insure the completion of the development. Planning - Conservation Director Lynn Duncan said Anderson should consider a tri-party agreement between the developer, town, and the bank. She also pointed out that the three lots closest to the wetlands may not be buildable and it would be up to the Conservation Commission to make the final determination on those parcels.

The project has been under discussion for about six months. Anderson projected the development could take another two years to finish.

When Anderson asked the board if they favored the plans, member Bruce MacDonald urged the board to "get moving" on the project.

"We drag our feet too much. If we're not willing to move forward, what is this board sitting here for?" he asked.

WHP member Tom Siracusa said he was concerned about the neighbors. He asked if the town was "giving up too much" in order to get six affordable units. Under Chapter 774, the state law governing this project, a developer can increase density and bypass local zoning ordinances in order to build up a town's low income housing stock.

Siracusa's question triggered a barrage of replies justifying the project.

"It's certainly not being done on a casual basis," said Ray Forrest, referring to previous discussion and the board's request to the developers to come back with a better plan.

"We've improved the look of an area," said Chairman Carole Hamilton, adding, "We've had every department in town take a look at this."

Duncan pointed out the board has taken a "big step" in favoring single family homes over multi-units or condominiums proposed in other projects. Selectman Candidate Tony Capuano added he'd much rather see this type of development than the multi-units in Shawsheen Commons, which was the first affordable project backed by the board.

Though they approved the development, Partnership members said Thomas Realty Trust still had to comply with certain conditions and requirements of other town boards.

Saturday Kindergarten is a big hit with both parents and kids

by Arlene Surprenant
Kindergarten youngsters at the Shawsheen School are having fun and learning a little bit extra these days through the combined efforts of the school PAC and their own parents. But all involved in the unique program point to former PAC President Dana Gray as the man who provided the impetus for the Saturday Kindergarten.

Gray felt something was missing when five years ago the PAC undertook an after school activity program geared for children in grades 1 through 6. It was at that time he came up with the idea of a series of Saturday activity sessions for kindergarten-aged students so they wouldn't be left out. Though the after school program didn't get off the ground last year because of a lack of volunteers, the kindergarten program is thriving.

Gray, his wife Debi, and Shawsheen parents Carole and Richard Humes are supervising this year's program, which runs every Saturday in March for an hour and a half each day. The four arrive at the Shawsheen School cafeteria 45 minutes early to set up tables and lay out pre-cut materials for the day's art activities. As parents bring in their youngsters, they have the option of staying to help out for all or part of the session. Most of the parents, says Carole, will help out at least once during the month.

The first year the program ran, there were 50 students enrolled for two hour sessions. This year, enrollment has gone down to 33 students and the sessions were reduced to eliminate a snack period.

"The kids didn't like this and they didn't like that," laughs Carole, explaining why they did away with the snacks.

Carole says the main purpose of the program is to let the students have fun and to encourage them to get along together and play cooperatively with fellow kindergartners.

The morning is divided into 15 to 20 minute activity periods. In between the different crafts, the children can play board games or can work off excess energy in the gym with organized activities like dodge ball or an original bowling game where the youngsters playact as the "pins." On this particular morning, the girls are creating paper flowers on doilies and the boys are using craft sticks, paper, and wood to build log cabins, teepees, or whatever comes to mind. As a snowstorm picks up outside, they all think spring as they get together to plant seeds in plastic pots.

Carole is enthusiastic about the program.

"The kids love it. It would be nice if we could extend it a few more weeks. This gives kids a special time with their parents without their siblings," she says.

The parents seem to agree.

PAC member Trudye Walsch participates with her daughter Brittany.

"I love the special time with her. This is also a good experience because I'm studying to be a teacher," she says, adding as an afterthought, "all those psychology classes come in handy."

Susan Donovan has volunteered for all four Saturdays to be close to her daughter Kristen. She gives a working mother's perspective: "As a working parent I appreciate being here and spending time with her. I think it's a great opportunity to see your children at school plus you get to meet the other parents. You don't get that when you're working," she says.

Bob Brennan, one of several volunteer dads, alternates with his wife so both can be close to their son Bobby Jr.

The students are more reserved but they, too, praise the program.

Five year old Krystina Smith comes because she likes school, especially the chance to make things to take home.

"I have lots of fun because there are good activities. I'm learning how to make things with beads and macaroni, and paper," says six year old Kristine Rego.

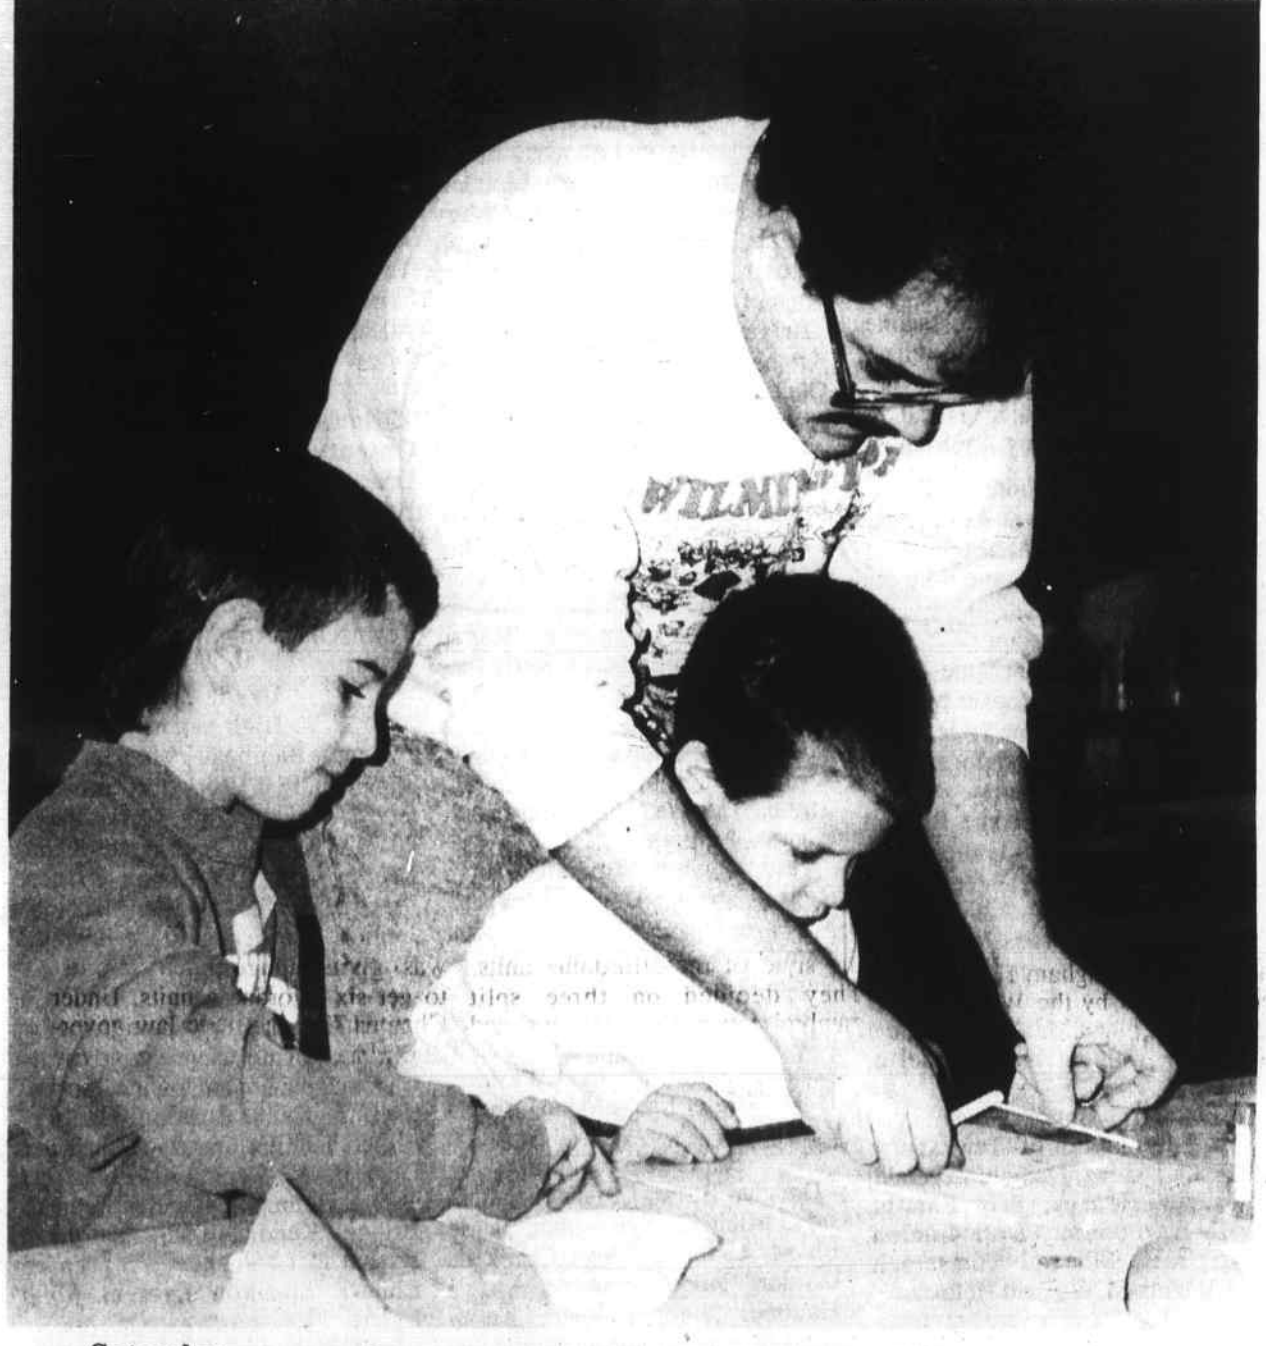

"I like meeting new friends," adds Kayla Humes.

The program enjoys the support of both the kindergarten teachers and Principal Dick Gorham. There are no plans to drop the successful format in the foreseeable future.

As Debi Gray puts it: "I'm in it for the duration."

In school on Saturday Six year old Brittany Walsch and her friend Katianne Martell eye some noodles for the next activity at the Shawsheen School's Saturday kindergarten program.

Saturday kindergarten Volunteer Richard Humes of the Shawsheen PAC helps Andrew Mondini and Brian Frongillo with a craft stick project at the Shawsheen Saturday kindergarten program.

Paper flowers Debi Gray and Carole Humes are parents who serve as supervisors of the Saturday kindergarten program at the Shawsheen School. They are shown helping their daughters, Dale Gray and Kayla Humes, with making paper flowers on Saturday.

Wilmington school newsMiddle school happenings*Technical education

The eighth grade technical education classes are finishing their review of communications through drafting with the drawing and construction of a paper box which will then be remade of sheet metal.

The seventh graders are also finishing their communications through drafting with their completion of a full scale drawing of one of their last year's projects, a tic-tac-toe game board. Once finished they will move into the manufacturing of a wooden note board.

The sixth graders have finished their introductory to communication through drafting by drawing and cutting out a "T" puzzle. They are now in the process of manufacturing a wooden "T" puzzle.

Physical education

In physical education classes all students have been actively involved in homeroom competition participating in flag football, field hockey, soccer, basketball and floor hockey units.

High goal scorers in the floor hockey tournament just competed are: sixth graders, Ryan Clancy, 19 and Michele McGonagle, 24; seventh graders, Jamie Campbell, 29 and Julie Babineau 6; eighth graders, Ryan Haubner, 27 and Megan Gaudet 11.

Art room

The sixth grade students are currently working on an art form new to many of them, poetry. They are creating an acoustic poem based on the life of a major artist. The students are working in pairs and use the name of the artist as the focus of the poem. The artists' name is written vertically and a poetic verse is created from each letter. When complete they will be presented to the class in a full scale "poetry reading."

Meanwhile, the seventh grade art students are just completing a detailed study of Georgia O'Keeffe's style and utilizing her techniques.

The eighth grade is working on sculptures created from newspaper and plaster. When complete, these sculptures will be painted and displayed for all to enjoy.

Home economics

The home economics classroom is in a flurry of activity. The eighth grade students, boys and girls alike, are very excited to have learned how to use the sewing machines and are anxiously looking forward to beginning their first major project!

Seventh graders are currently reviewing proper table setting, measuring and following recipe directions. They will soon be making homemade apple pie.

Sixth graders meet only for eight or nine classes and are presently in the middle of their sewing units. They are making butterfly magnets. The sixth graders are looking forward to their food preparation unit with much enthusiasm.

Media center

The Historical Atlas of Massachusetts was presented to the North Intermediate School by Massachusetts Senate and the House of Representatives. The Atlas examines the social, political, and geographic landscape of the state and the faces that shaped our commonwealth over time. It is produced and published by the University of Mass, Amherst faculty and students.

Health education

Health Education classes are offered once a week to all sixth, seventh and eighth graders. During the first half of the year students are given a variety of health topics that rotate during the three years spent in the Intermediate Schools. The second half of the year involves a unit in human sexuality and, in the spring, a unit in substance abuse.

Surgery team in Lithuania

Podiatrist visits Lithuania

by Arlene Surprenant

A chance to relieve the suffering of children and adults with painful foot ailments and to demonstrate the latest techniques in foot surgery led Wilmington Podiatrist Dr. Kenneth Leavitt on a trip halfway around the world this winter. Accompanying the local doctor on his trip to Lithuania in November were his associates, Dr. Brian Zinsmeister and Dr. Elizabeth Vulanich.

The trip developed from a friendship with Dr. Manvilus Kocius, an orthopedic surgeon who observed Leavitt in surgery at Winchester Hospital. When the Lithuanian doctor said "come," that's all the encouragement Leavitt needed to gather his team and medical equipment together and set forth. The doctors each paid $3500 out of their own pockets for transportation and any equipment and antibiotics which weren't donated by suppliers. The government paid for room and board. All but the bone-cutting equipment was left behind.

The highlight of the two and a half week trip was the ten days Leavitt and his associates spent at Vilnius University Emergency Hospital giving lectures and performing surgery. Sixty operations were done to replace joints and correct deformities like flat feet, bunions, and hammer toes.

"These were sophisticated procedures," explained Leavitt. He added that in Lithuania there are no podiatrists, and surgeons only treat life-threatening conditions. Performing procedures to relieve pain is a foreign idea to many of the physicians.

The three doctors also trained about 10 surgeons and gave lectures on the different procedures to try to "whet" the surgeons' interest in further study.

With the lack of proper training, equipment, and Western medical journals, Leavitt said he felt like he was "introducing the wheel."

"I felt a great need over there. The Soviets deprived these people of medical help. There was a devaluation of life," said Leavitt. He went on to add that Communism took away the peoples' motivation and will to work and kept them in a form of prison society.

"There is an anesthetized, apathetic society. Basically, the people look like us but they don't think like us," explained Leavitt, adding there's currently no direction in their lives though the will to survive is strong.

During the trip, there was a lack of privacy and an inability to roam freely. Part of that, he explained, is the responsibility of the host to keep a constant eye on foreign guests. Two of the most impressive tourist attractions on Leavitt's itinerary were the 500 year old Trakai Castle and Old Town, billed as the largest Jewish ghetto, which saw its population reduced from 250,000 Jews to 5,000 in World War II.

Though it rained every day he was there, Leavitt did get to see some of the countryside, which resembled that in New England. However, since most of the Lithuanians in and around the cities live in concrete high rise apartments, tourists have to go 60 or more miles away to see any of the homes.

Leavitt glosses over the least favorite part of his experience: the food. Meals consisting of pea and carrot salad, overcooked meat, and other bland offerings is best forgotten. Leavitt most enjoyed meeting the people themselves, all of whom were "extremely friendly" and responsive to the team and spoke to them through an interpreter.

Leavitt told the Town Crier he got a great deal of satisfaction out of helping the people.

"All humanitarian efforts in the last 100 years were spawned by efforts of Americans. Our basic obligation is to care for God's creation. We worked long hours but we were energized; we were on an adrenalin high," he said.

Will he go back? "It's always on the docket," Leavitt said. In fact, with the potential for financial assistance from America Cares or International Med-Assist, which offers legal and medical help to Lithuanians, that day may come sooner than he thinks.

Chamber welcomes Woodbriar

Dennis Sargent of Concord, president of the new Woodbriar of Wilmington nursing home, welcomed guests from the Wilmington Chamber of Commerce at a luncheon on Tuesday.

Woodbriar hosts Chamber luncheon

by Captain Larz Neilson

Woodbriar of Wilmington, a new nursing home on West Street in Wilmington was welcomed by Chamber of Commerce members on March 16. Located near Lowell Street, Woodbriar served a luncheon for the guests. The new facility has 142 beds for patients, in a well appointed building.

Dennis Sargent, the president of Woodbriar was host for the luncheon. Donna Wayman, of Re/Max Realty, president of the Wilmington Chamber of Commerce was the presiding officer. Donna had a special presentation for Bill Poirier of Poni Express, for his special services to the Chamber.

"It is the tremendous spirit of volunteerism, and the involvement by so many members of the Chamber that is the main reason our Chamber has flourished these past years," Poirier was told, by Donna. Dr. Geraldine O'Donnell, Superintendent of Schools discussed education as a concept, in a talk after the luncheon.

"Education is a very critical factor in our society," she declared, "The U.S. Department of Labor has recently produced a study of the work required in the schools, advising of the skills that are necessary."

"In the high schools of Boston every school has a 'corporate partner' which assists in the planning. In Haverhill the Chamber of Commerce has a Business Collaboration, with a five year strategic plan."

"Hundreds of volunteers are assisting in the Improvement of Technology."

"To succeed in the 21st century, we must become a 'nation of students.' We need a fundamental change, which involves every part of our society."

"We need our own 'Productive Collectivity.'"

Torkildsen to meet local residents

Newly elected Congressman Peter Torkildsen of the 6th District will be visiting the area on Friday, March 19, and invites the residents of Wilmington, North Reading and Reading to meet with him and take any questions and concerns they have for him to address. The meeting site is the North Reading Town Hall and the hours will be 7:30 to 9 p.m.

Congressman Torkildsen is a member of both the House Armed Services Committee and the House Small Business Committee. He has also been appointed to the Armed Services' Subcommittees on Research & Technology and Military Installations, as well as the Small Business' Subcommittee on Regulation, Business Opportunity and Technology.

In his first speech on the floor of the U.S. House of Representatives, Congressman Torkildsen announced his sponsorship of legislation to reinstate the Investment Tax Credit at the federal level. Torkildsen stated "This legislation represents the kind of positive steps the government can take to encourage investment and create jobs. This is a bill that both Republicans and Democrats can support." The bill calls for a 10 percent tax credit applied to manufacturing, transportation, extraction, production, utilities, pollution control services and research.

In another move to fulfill a campaign promise and to reduce the cost of government, Torkildsen has set up a budget (as an example of what can be done) to reduce the cost of his office operations by 10 percent. This comes on top of his previously announced donation to charity of this year's Congressional salary increase.

The North Reading Town Hall is just outside Wilmington. On Rte. 62, take the first left (North Street) after crossing the town line into North Reading. The Town Hall is a short distance down the road on the left hand side.

For those unable to meet with the Congressman, he may be reached at his local office at 70 Washington St., Salem, MA 01970, phone (508) 741-1600, or in Washington at U.S. House of Representatives #120 Cannon Bldg., Washington, D.C. 20515, phone (202) 225-8020.

Conference planned on environmental cleanups

UMass, Lowell, U Southern Maine and UMaine-Orono will co-host a two day regional conference entitled "Environmental Remediation for Redevelopment." This conference to be held Thursday and Friday, April 1 and 2, will be hosted by the Wannalancit Office and Technology Center, Lowell.

Intended for owners and potential developers of toxic sites, as well as other professionals involved in both the cleanup and redevelopment process, the conference will focus on the "team approach" involved in successful projects.

Traditionally, two factors influenced a site owner's decision about the cleanup and reuse of a polluted site: 1) legal requirements; and 2) the potential value of the site for other uses. While owners of toxic sites often abandoned their properties (due to the lack of environmental and economic pressures), recent enforcement of environmental regulations and subsequent prosecutions of "toxic dumpers" have combined to eliminate this traditional solution to their problem.

As these site owners considered their cleanup options, they are often subject to influences that not only seek to eliminate the site's potential health risks but also to maintain its role as an active contributor to the local economy. This conference presents the thesis that toxic site owners should consider mitigating the substantial cost of a remediation project by incorporating redevelopment opportunities.

The $295 registration fee includes breaks and luncheons, as well as a reception at the Boot Mills Museum on Thursday night. For more information call (508) 934-2405.

"On being a sibling"

Adjusting to a new addition in the family can be difficult for everyone, especially for an older child who may feel that a new baby means he or she is no longer important. Helping youngsters understand about a new baby is important to ensure family harmony.

To help youngsters two and a half to 10 years of age adjust to having a new baby in the home, a special program, "On Being a Sibling," will be held at Melrose-Wakefield Hospital Monday, April 12 from 6:15 to 7:15 p.m. in Perkins Lecture Hall, 585 Lebanon St., Melrose. Registration is required and there is a $10 fee per family.

Families are encouraged to attend together to learn more about helping an older child make a healthy adjustment to a new brother or sister. The program offers helpful tips for parents, such as minimizing sibling rivalry, and how to talk to your child before and after the birth of the baby. Instructors will speak directly with children about what they can do for their new brother or sister and each child will make a special bib for their new sibling.

Reduced fare MBTA cards

Friday, March 18 between 9:30 a.m. and 2:30 p.m., Wilmington seniors and those in surrounding towns 65 years of age and older and younger persons with a disability will be able to receive a reduced fare MBTA card at the Buzzell Senior Citizen Center. With this card a senior citizen may ride the T subways for 20 cents, local buses for 15 cents and express buses, commuter rails and commuter boats for half fare at all times.

To obtain a card each person must take proof that they are 65 or older or proof of disability. Proof of age can be in the form of a drivers license, birth certificate, food stamps id card or Medicare card. A 50 cent cash fee is required.

If you already have an MBTA discount id card you do not have to get another unless you have lost the one you had and would like another. A disabled person will have to take a notification of approval by the MBTA that they have been reviewed and accepted as a disabled person under the age of 65.

Income tax assistance

Income tax preparers Joe and Mollie will be at the center for only two more weeks. In the two months they have been with us they have helped prepare over 50 seniors taxes. If you need and want help from them, 657-7595. Please call between 9 a.m. and 4:30 p.m.

Blood pressure checks

Nurse Ann will be at the Center checking blood pressures and giving diabetes tests Thursday, March 18 starting at 1:30 p.m. Remember, diabetes is a silent illness. We do not see or feel symptoms of the illness until it becomes a serious medical problem. The only way it can be detected in an early stage is through a simple blood test, given at the center next Thursday. If you have not had a test for some time, it would be wise to do so this week.

Cholesterol screenings

Tuesday, March 23, cholesterol screenings will be given by Nurse Ann at the center. Another medical problem, if left undetected can lead to a very serious medical problem. Call the center before Tuesday for an appointment. We have to let Ann know how much material she will have to take for all the test.

Nutrition support

The Nutrition Support group will meet in the craft room of the Senior Center Tuesday, March 23. This is a wonderful illness preventive program. Watching your diet and the foods you eat along with regular exercise is difficult for anyone to do alone. But with a support group going through it with you it is much easier and actually becomes fun. Why not join them?

Medicare

It would seem that some seniors receiving Medicare do not know that they are not covered under the medical portion of Medicare. That is part B. For some reason when they applied for Social Security at the Age of 65, they did not ask for Medicare part A and B. Part A is given to us free of charge through the Social Security Administration. It pays only for hospital care, not our medical care while in the hospital. To cover the cost of our medical care we have to take the B part of Medicare. That will pay 80 percent of our medical bills in and out of the hospital. In 1933 the cost is a pittance compared to the amount of medical cost that we would have to pay out of our pockets. Every person who qualifies for Social Security and Medicare should take Medicare A and B. If you did not take B when you applied at 65 and want it now, you will have to call the Social Security office before March 31 as on that day open enrollment for those who did not enroll at 65 will end. After March 31, you will have to wait until January 1994 to sign up. Call the Social Security office at 1-800-772-1213.

Robinson buzzes net

Wilmington's Maureen Robinson fires a shot on the University of New Hampshire goalie during the recent women's college hockey playoffs. Robinson led the Huskies to an excellent season.

Sports Notebook

by Rick Cooke

Some random winter thoughts

Some random thoughts while wrapping up the winter notebook and hoping that I've seen the last of the snowbanks that have made my street and driveway nightmare alley.

Wilmington High School basketball players should get down on their knees and give thanks for the fact that they have a coach in Jim McCune who cares enough to drive the team in order to get the most out of his athletes. McCune has proven himself as one of the best young basketball coaches in the MVC, and any complaints about the guy's practice style are simply ridiculous. McCune can coach, and Wilmington is lucky to have him.

The Red Sox season is about to get underway, with veterans again dominating the lineup. Fourth place would be a solid year for a team that is just holding on while youngsters on the farm develop. Lou Gorman is a nice banquet speaker, and that's about it.

The Patriots have begun to build a solid foundation through the free agent draft with the signings of former Boston College guard Steve Trapilo and defensive lineman Leon Seals. New coach Bill Parcells likes big linemen who can blow people off the football, and that's exactly what he has in Trapilo, who at 300 pounds was one of the best guards in the NFL before injuries slowed him down in New Orleans.

I would like to see the team draft quarterback Drew Bledsoe with the number one pick, but look for Parcells to trade down and build defensively while signing a free agent quarterback.

My favorite sporting event gets underway this week with the road to the NCAA Final Four and the collegiate basketball championship. My picks are Michigan vs. Seton Hall and Indiana vs. Cincinnati, with Michigan playing Indiana for the title in what shapes up as a dream match-up. If the game is close, Bobby Knight will win, no doubt about it.

LeMoine and Gagne teamed with Sakakeeny and Keith Grant for third place in the 400 yard free and medley relays and a fourth place finish in the 800 free relay.

Youth hockey

Squirt B's continue to dominate Maroon Division

Wilmington's Squirt B's continue to dominate the Squirt Maroon Division of the Valley Youth Hockey League with 12 wins and a tie.

The team has consistently played hard and competitively this season. Outstanding goaltending and defensive work have complemented the front line goal scorers on the team.

The hard work of the team is evident in the number one position in their division. Everyone on the team has contributed to the wins and has a goal.

Wilmington 4 Andover 2

The game was scoreless through the first period. Wilmington would take control of the second period when David Silva assisted by Mike Corcoran put one in the net at 9:05 to put Wilmington on the scoreboard.

Eric Williams placed third in the 200 yard breaststroke, fourth in the 100 breaststroke, sixth in the 400 I.M., ninth in the 200 I.M. and 15th in the 200 free.

David and Mike would repeat their play again at 5:18 of the second period to make it 2-0.

Blain Smith made some spectacular saves to keep the Andover team off the scoreboard in the second period.

Andover came back in the third period with two goals, but T.J. Flynn kept Wilmington in the lead with a goal assisted by Kenny Chin.

With just 26 seconds left in the third period Andover was awarded a penalty shot that could tie up the game.

Goalie Blain Smith met the challenge and guarded the net, robbing the Andover team.

With just five seconds left in the game, T.J. Flynn blew past Andover to score his second goal unassisted.

Wilmington 8 Woburn 2
Wilmington and Woburn's previous game ended in a tie and this game was expected to be as hard as that contest.

Peter Olinski was eighth in the 50 free and 15th in the 100 free.

Diana Liberty placed second in the 500 free, third in the 1000 free, sixth in the 400 I.M., 12th in the 200 fly and 13th in the 200 free.

Kait McLaughlin finished eighth in the 200 fly, while Tracie Grant was 15th in the 100 fly and Kristenn Perrault placed 15th in the 500 free.

In related Pirate news, Kevin Eppig of Winchester was named Swimmer of the Year by the Reading Chronicle and Daily Times for his accomplishments during the high school swim season.

Both teams held each other back from scoring until four minutes into the first period when T.J. Flynn put one in the net unassisted for Wilmington.

Woburn would score 22 seconds later and it looked like another tough game was to be played.

Wilmington got fired up and came back scoring three more goals in the first period. Kevin Gillespie, David Silva and Mike Whitney (unassisted) scored for Wilmington.

The second and third periods belonged to Wilmington, with T.J. Flynn scoring once in the second and twice in the third period.

T.J. had four goals in the game and one assist and continued to be the number one point person in the division.

Jason Callahan put the eighth goal in the net for Wilmington assisted by Mike Corcoran and T.J. Flynn.

Assists on the goals were given to Stephen Brady, Mike Whitney and Kenny Chin (two).

Goalie Blain Smith again held the Woburn team down along with the defensive players on the team.

Wilmington 4 Wakefield 0
Goalie Blain Smith registered another shutout and put in a great performance in net for the team.

Stephen Brady on defense took control of the puck and blew by the Wakefield team to register the first goal unassisted at 10:25 of the first period.

T.J. Flynn assisted Kenny Chin who would make it 2-0 at 1:39. Joe Delaney would score unassisted with under one minute left in the first period.

Kenny Chin would be the lone goal scorer of the second period, with an assist from T.J. Flynn.

Wilmington held back the Wakefield team, preventing any scoring. Great defensive teamwork by Michael Comer, Danny Fogg and Mike Whitney.

Wilmington 8 NH East 2
Kevin Gillespie started the Wilmington team rolling with a goal at 11:09 of the first period assisted by Danny Fonzi and Joe Babineau.

David Silva and T.J. Flynn would score goals in this period to make the score 3-0.

Caring Cup Golf Tournament

Phebe Goldman, executive director of the Home Health Foundation of Andover, has announced the date and plans for the third Annual Caring Cup Golf Tournament.

The tournament will be held Monday, May 17, at the Andover Country Club on Canterbury Street.

Proceeds from the tournament will benefit Visiting Nurse Association HomeCare, Merrimack Valley Hospice, and HomeCare, Inc., non-profit subsidiaries of the Home Health Foundation of Andover.

The tournament is unique in that it is the only mixed tournament held in the Merrimack Valley.

According to Ila S. Cox and Crechten Leone, co-chairs of the Tournament Committee, the tournament will consist of mixed teams of two men and two women in a Callaway, Scotch, best ball format.

Tee-off time will be at 1:30 p.m. The $125.00 per person charge will include all golf amenities, awards, a luncheon and evening banquet.

"The Caring Cup Tournament offers a wonderful opportunity to play for a worthy cause," according to Mrs. Cox. "We appreciate the strong community support the tournament has attracted throughout the years."

Since 1895, Home Health Foundation agencies have been serving communities in the Merrimack Valley, Northeastern Mass. and Southern N.H.

Last year, over 240,000 home visits were made by agencies to the chronically ill, mothers and infants, elders, AIDS and Hospice patients, as well as many others.

Sponsorships are available for tees, greens, golf carts, and other options.

Golfers' sign-up sheets for individuals or teams are available. Contact Deborah Reiter at the agencies' offices at One Union Street, or call 1-800-933-5593 for more information on the Third Annual Caring Cup Golf Tournament.

SMALL BUSINESS INSURANCE

QUESTION: I am trying to figure out a budget for my first venture into a small business. How much should I provide for liability insurance?

ANSWER: The form of liability insurance will depend upon the type of business. If it is a retail store, the primary hazard will be on the premises itself. An Owner's/Landlord's and Tenant's liability policy will cover it. The policy premiums are normally based on square footage. A retailer may also need a Product Liability Policy covering the possibility of faulty merchandise. A comprehensive general policy will include both types of coverage. Make sure your coverage is in effect BEFORE you open.

LIABILITY INSURANCE for a small business is vital BEFORE you open for business.

Donald Stewart named as new Potentate of Aleppo Temple

Donald D. Stewart, of Westwood, Mass. was installed as Illustrious Potentate of the Aleppo Temple Shrine, after being elected at the annual meeting of the well known fraternal organization on January 20, held in its Wilmington headquarters.

As Potentate, Stewart will be the leader of approximately 11,000 Shriners in eastern and central Mass. who devote much of their energies in the support of the 23 Shriners Hospitals for Crippled Children in North America, where any child, regardless of race, color or creed, may receive quality medical and hospital care, at absolutely no cost to the parents, third party payors, or the government.

In one of his first official acts, in addition to making key appointments to his staff, Potentate Stewart has given enthusiastic approval for the joint sponsorship with the Mass. High School Football Coaches Assoc. of the running of the 15th annual Shriners High School All-Star Football Classic, scheduled to be played at Boston University's Nickerson Field June 18. To date, this Mass high school football showcase has raised nearly $400,000 for the Shriners charitable hospital network for burned and crippled children.

Stewart grew up in Roxbury and the South End, attended public schools in the city, and Browne and Nichols Academy in Cambridge. A champion swimmer, he qualified for several collegiate scholarships, opting, however, for a career in the automobile business.

During World War II, he became a tank commander and instructor, out of Fort Erwin, Calif., with the armored Combat Center.

A member of one of Boston's famous political families, his dad, William Stewart, Democratic City Chairman, counted among his acquaintances such political legends as Mayor James Michael Curley, Congressman John F. Kennedy, et al.

A member of the Board of Governors, Shriners Burns Institute, Boston, and Chairman of its Patient Applications Committee, he served for 12 years, retiring as an emeritus member in 1986. His other Masonic credentials include membership in the Scottish Rite of Boston Commandery, where he served as Eminent Commander, and the Shrine, where he served on the Ritualistic Degree Team prior to ascending through the chairs to his current position as Illustrious Potentate.

A Past Master of the Fourth Estate Lodge, and currently a Trustee, his past Masonic credentials include, additionally, High Priest, St. Andrew's Royal Arch Chapter, Illustrious Master, Boston Council, and Commander and Trustee, Boston Commandery No. 2, Knights Templar. He is a 32nd degree Scottish Rite Mason in the Valley of Boston, and a member of Boston Court No. 103, Royal Order of Jestes.

Wardrobe wizards

Even with snow piling up outside the door, the best way to think spring is with some new clothes. Christine Basque and Jennifer Young of the Fashion Bug at Wilmington Plaza have some bright ideas and bright colors.

Focus on spring with a hot new look

by Arlene Surprenant

'Think Spring' is the watchword after last weekend's blizzard roared up the East Coast. One way for women to wish away the winter blues is to focus on what's hot this spring in fashion and face makeup.

A mix of bold casuals and soft, feminine career wear is the season's newest look, according to Christine Basque, manager of the Fashion Bug store in Wilmington Plaza. Solid ribbed tops in bright colors coupled with striped denim shorts, pants with a slight flare, or wrap around skirts are big. So too is the Aztec look with bold designs in teal, gold, red, navy, and bright white coupled with big bold accessories. Two piece denim outfits with crotch sweatshirts, short crop cotton sweaters with raglan sleeves, and lace applique t-shirts are feminine and flattering.

"For the career women, the look is more of a soft style, a real pretty look," says Basque.

Two and three piece jacket dresses featuring long collarless jackets with short pleated dresses or skirts in creamy pastels promise to be popular. Spring's the season for romance and long skirts, either full or with a slit up the back, fit the bill when matched with a chambray or rayon blouse or shirt. Long button down prairie style dresses in shades of blue and sandy beige point to a Southeastern influence. They will compete with floral challis dresses in bright new colors and slim, belted dresses.

Comfort is the key, which makes materials like rayon, cotton, and chambray 'in' this spring. While navy is making a comeback, the hottest color will be teal, predicts Basque.

Makeup traditionally complements a woman's wardrobe and this year is no exception.

"For spring, they just plucked everything out of nature from naturals down to earth tones. The strongest colors are the blue-greens of the ocean," says Wilmington's Carol Beaudoin, an Independent Professional Beauty Consultant with Mary Kay cosmetics.

Like the newest spring fashions, the look in eye, cheek, and lip color is "soft, luscious, and ultra feminine." Two new trends in eye color offer distinctly different looks: one is a sultry smoky eye in deep, rich tones while the other is a lighter, brighter eye in pale, natural hues. Colors like Almond and Raisin translate into spring's earthy side while water-color hues like Storm and Peacock create a more romantic illusion of gentle movement. Eye shadows have a hint of iridescence that adds a reflective quality to make eyes look bigger, adds Beaudoin.

This spring's cheek colors are sheer, clear shades like Sunny Coral, Fresh Peach, and Rosy Pink. The idea, says Beaudoin, is to look as if you're glowing naturally.

The newest lipstick shades have a softer edge with undertones of brown, peach, or pink. Dramatic eyes should be balanced with lighter lips while more natural, "subdued" eyes should be balanced with a more glamorous mouth, explains Beaudoin. Mary Kay's spring line of lipsticks range from the cool look of Pomegranate and Burgandy Brocade to the warmth of Sienna Sunrise and the neutral look of Tawny Rose and Tea Time Tan.

So get moving. Now's the time to put winter behind you and adopt a whole new look this spring.

For Heavy Metal, it's Trajik Majik

by Erik Neilson

Trajik Majik, a band from Tewksbury, plays heavy metal, hard rock, and just plain, "something for everyone."

They have come a long way since they started in April of 1992. They have played in 16 shows and have made it to the finals in the Battle of the Bands at the Rockpile.

Vocalist Chris Nichols is 16, and works at McDonald's. Mike Morrison, lead guitarist, also age 16 has been playing for four years. Mike DaSilva is the bass guitarist. He is 17, and has been playing for five years. He plays soccer and also works at McDonald's. The drummer, Erick Smallidge, 18, has been playing for eleven years. Erick works at the Trull Brook Golf Course. All of them are into hockey.

The manager, Elsa Marsh is a school teacher in Tewksbury

Memorial High School.

It is amazing how they work the band around everyday life and everyday problems. Each band member equally contributes, and each member has family support.

One of the problems they face is the type of community the live in, where many people like rap. They had a tough time getting people to try their music, but it all pulled through and they now have a lot of fans.

Like all relationships it is hard to keep it together sometimes, but they try to keep everything out in the open. Everyone talks freely among the band.

Their favorite place to play is at Chapter 2 in Salisbury but may be seen in the Escape Club in Billerica, North Meadow Racket and Health Club, or the V.F.W. in Tewksbury. They played on February 27 at Chapter 2.

The band members have met some famous music groups, including Britney Fox, Widow Maker, Spread Eagle, Kings X, and My Sister's Machine.

Trajik Majik write all of their own songs, which they play exclusively on stage. They were influenced in their music style by Britney Fox, Twisted Sister, Extreme, Shotgun Messiah, and many other bands.

They will be doing a benefit concert for Leukemia research, but the date still has not been set. Also, expect to see them this summer when they go on tour of clubs on the East Coast. Be on the look out for two demo tapes coming out soon. One, off the wall heavy metal with six songs, and the other a ballad with six songs.

For further information about concerts or tapes, call (603) 635-3828 and ask for Elsa Marsh.

Retirement A child's view

We are grateful to Anne Kronberg who submitted the following article entitled "A Child's View of Retirement..."

After a summer vacation the teacher asked her small pupils how they spent their holidays. One small boy's reply went like this: "We always spend our vacation with Grandpa and Grandma." They used to live up here in a big brick house, but Grandpa got retarded and they moved to Florida.

"They live in a place, with a lot of retarded people in cement houses where they say 'cat walk' outside the door. They go to a big building they call the wrecked hall. But if it was wrecked, it is all fixed up now."

"They ride big three wheel tricycles and play games and do exercises - but not very good. There is a swimming pool and they go in and just stand there in the water with their hats on and talk about their doctors and their pressures and their children and "two-fers." My grandma used to bake cookies, and make lots of chicken soup. Now we eat "Almost Home" and our chicken soup comes from a Swiss Chalet - at four o'clock in the afternoon.

"As you come into their park there is a doll house with a man sitting in it. He watches all day so they can't get out without him seeing them. Everybody wears badges with their names on them. I guess they don't know who they are."

"My Grandma says Grandpa worked hard all his life and earned his retirement. I wish they would move back home, but I guess the man in the doll house won't let them out."

THE WILD SIDE OF IRELAND

The most popular images of Ireland are often of quiet country pastimes: sipping a cup of tea in front of a roaring peat fire, taking in the grandeur of an ancient castle, stopping at a thatched-roof bed and breakfast for the night. There is, however, a wilder side that is there for the hiker, bicyclist or back roads ramblers to claim. The northwestern country of Donegal is a good place to start. Its dramatic, craggy coastline offers unsurpassed fishing and hiking, and yet is often bypassed by tourists. Also, the northern mountain ranges of Arigna and Slieve Anierin (Mountain of Iron) features heather-covered peaks and valleys that are best appreciated up close, by foot or on bicycle.

Isn't it time you indulged yourself in the vacation of a lifetime? It's not really all that complicated. Just tell us your fantasies and let us make them come true for you. There are many places in this world off the beaten path (like the wilds of Ireland) that deserve your attention. We've been to many of them and hope you get to experience them, too. Call us at ALL AROUND TRAVEL, 658-2313, and let's talk about them. Quality service available to leisure & corporate travelers here at 203 Jefferson Rd., N. Wilmington (Rt. 62).

HINT: Ireland has over 1,000 miles of marked hiking trails, none more than a mile or two away from a friendly pub.

Kids Who Smoke

By KEN MAGUIRE

It takes place everyday, in school bathrooms, on the street corners, driving with friends, in bedrooms with the window cranked open, and even with parental consent in some cases.

Cigarette smoking begins for kids as a fun experiment but often turns into addiction, and serious health problems, namely cancer. But such morbid thoughts rarely pass through a youngster's mind when his or her friends light up at a party and encourage them to partake.

Lending an ear to a recent conversation between a group of girls at a local high school, the joys of smoking were expanded upon:

"I like smoking," said one 17-year-old. "If you quit smoking, you're bored. There's nothing to do."

Added her 15-year-old friend, "I used to wake up in the morning and before brushing my teeth, I'd have a cigarette. It tastes good in the morning. I don't know why."

An 18-year-old, who has been smoking for seven years, said she is not worried about health risks. "It doesn't bother me. I'm not trying to quit. I smoke about a pack a day."

Another one of the young ladies has tried to quit, but stated it's easier said than done. "It's an addiction. I've been smoking since the sixth grade, it's just a habit I guess." She is also 18 years of age and estimates her daily cigarette intake to be about a pack a day.

Most of the girls acknowledged the health risks involved with smoking, but few found the risk as a life threatening one. Had the American Cancer Society (ACS) eavesdropped on the conversation, there might have been an earthquake on the North Shore.

According to their statistics, 80 percent of all smokers today began smoking before the age of 18 and the average age that most kids first experiment with cigarettes is 10.

In addition, ACS states show that 30 percent of all cancer deaths are tobacco related. Tobacco accounts for almost all forms of lung cancer, as well as cancers of the mouth, pharynx, larynx, esophagus, pancreas, uterus, cervix, kidney, and bladder. Smoking also accounts for a ridiculously high number of heart disease cases.

But if that is not enough to dissuade a young person from smoking, the ACS says young smokers face a greater possibility, throughout their lives, of acquiring colds, painful gastric ulcers, chronic bronchitis, and that always pleasurable condition known as emphysema.

Returning to our teenage friends, the health risks are largely overlooked. "I smoke all the time," said the 15-year-old. Lung cancer? "I usually smoke one right after the other." Emphysema? No, freedom of expression.

Of course, not all young people are into the smoking scene, in fact, many are turned off at there mere mention of a cigarette. "I really don't like smoking at all," said one 16-year-old gentleman. "I don't put people down for it, but all that second hand smoke bothers me."

The young man added that

THIS YOUNG SMOKER is just one of many youngsters who "light up" on a regular basis. Some say it "relieves stress," while others say it's "disgusting." Everybody has an opinion on smoking, including kids.

kids would probably never start if they didn't feel pressured. "The first time they do it, they just do it to be cool. It's just kind of sad." Besides, he said, kissing a girl who smokes is "like kissing an ashtray."

Back at the girls' conversation, a 17-year-old steps in to inform the others that smoking is "disgusting." She is worried that second hand smoke is jeopardizing her health. "You people are making me sick." She added that even the heavy use of perfume does not hide the smell of smoke, a statement not refuted by the others.

An expert on the subject of smoking, in particular smoking by young people, is Dr. Gregory Conley, who is the head of the (Don Young photo) state Department of Public Health's Tobacco Patrol program. He said the reason kids smoke is three-fold.

"It's a combination of factors," Conley said. "Peer pres-

There is "Good News" for those of us who loved the beautiful music on the "Voice of Firestone" program. It was a half-hour television program in the 1950s. It featured singers like Eleanor Steber, Dorothy Kirsten, Jerome Hines, Leontyne Price, James McCracken, Robert Merrill, Lilly Pons, Lawrence Tibbett and Ezio Pinza and many other great singers.

The "Good News," Folks, is that according to Richard Dyer, videotapes of the Firestone Program will be available. The kinescopes of the program are housed in the Firestone Library at the New England Conservatory. The theme song of this wonderful program opened and closed with the singing of "If I Could Tell You of My Devotion...etc."

Imogene Ball said, "A dollar goes a long way these days. You can carry it for miles before you find anything it will buy."...In a speech, Paul Simon of Stoneham said, "Folks, I'm a self-made man." Later I said to Paul, "Well, at least you can't blame anyone else."

Folks, we can't expect our ships to come in unless we send one out. Dennis Tully sent this note to his aunt, "I'm sorry that I forgot your birthday last week. It would serve me right if you forget mine next Saturday."... George Hill said, "We pay men more to pour concrete than we pay teachers to mold minds."...No one likes to hear the words "You're fired!" but it softens the blow when said this way to Joe Ravidia, "Joe, I don't know how we're going to get along without you, but starting Monday we're going to find out."

Juried Photo Exhibition at Griffin Center in Winchester

The Arthur Griffin Center for Photographic Art in Winchester announces a Juried Photography Exhibition, open to amateur and professional photographers of all ages. The purposes of the exhibition are two: to support photographers working at all levels, with diverse equipment and interests and with unique visions and styles; and to provide those interested in photography with the opportunity to view, over a six week period, a range of excellent work being done by amateurs and professionals.

Juniors, ages 16 and younger, will have their own juried exhibition. At least 12 photographs will be selected from junior participants for the exhibition.

Each entrant may submit a maximum of three photographs, in black and white or color. The eight categories are: landscape...color only; landscape...B/W only; organic life (plants, birds, insects, underwater life, world and domestic animals); commentary...photo-journalism; still life; action; architecture; inventive expression (experimental work).

Local physician receives National Home Care award

Alan P. Abrams, M.D., a consulting geriatrician at Winchester Hospital, was named the 1992-1993 Physician of the Year by the National Association for Home Care. The NAHC is made up of more than 5,000 home health care agencies from across the U.S.

Dr. Abrams said he felt a "sense of elation" upon learning he had been selected from a field of several hundred nominees.

"The nicest aspect of this award is that it tells me that the community and agencies I've worked with approve of the way we work together," he says. "And it's national recognition for what we're doing locally."

A practicing geriatrician for ten years and board-certified in geriatrics, Dr. Abrams received his medical degree from New York University School of Medicine. He completed his internship and residency at St. Elizabeth's Hospital in Boston and the Cambridge Hospital respectively. He also holds a master's degree in public health from the Harvard School of Public Health.

Why did he choose geriatrics as a specialty?

"It was attractive because I felt you had to be an even better doctor to care for frail elders," he explains. "You have to be meticulously careful, because the potential risks involved in

Three winners will be chosen in each of the eight designated categories by a panel of jurors with acknowledged expertise in photography. Award-winning photographs will be exhibited at the Center from May 15 to June 20. A Best in Show, to be selected from among the winners, will be given the opportunity to exhibit between eight and twelve of his or her photographs for the duration of the juried exhibition.

In addition to a series of photographic events planned by the Center to accompany the exhibition, there will be two receptions honoring the participants. Saturday, May 22, 2 to 4 p.m. will be the Opening of the Juried Exhibition and a reception for Best in Show. Saturday, June 5, 11 a.m. to 12 noon, planned to coincide with Winchester's gala Town Day, will be the Award Presentations and Reception. Both events are open to the public.

HAZING DOCUMENT CAUSES STIR AT WILMINGTON LIBRARY - The old news was that in an effort to bring its school system into compliance with the state's anti-hazing laws, the Wilmington School Committee unanimously voted to comply with all recommendations from the state Department of Education regarding hazing incidents, described by the state as "reportable acts of child abuse."

For starters, the Wilmington High handbook's section on hazing and disciplinary measures will be revised, professional development on hazing law and self-esteem will be conducted for staff members, and orientation programs will be held for students and parents.

Copies of hazing reports filed by the state director of the Education Department's Bureau of Student Development and Health; the former Wilmington superintendent of schools, and the Wilmington High principal were to have been made available to the public in the Public Documents Section of the Wilmington Public Library.

The more recent news is that Library Director Philip Meriam received the reports purchased at the Roman House by Anne Linehan and donated to the library, bound them and wrote a cover page for them. However, according to the Wilmington "Town Crier," library board of trustees chairman Pat Duggan "ordered" Meriam to remove them from library shelves.

After discussions among those involved about censorship and First Amendment violations, the documents - which according to library trustee Jim Banda can't be political because once they become "public" documents, that's what they are - are back on library shelves.

This week's news is that if you're thinking of going to the Wilmington library for some heavy reading, check out whether the material is available at the moment - the whether in Wilmington might still be hazy.

NORTH READING TOWN MEETING STILL SUBJECT TO ONE-DAY DELAY: In the hope of encouraging attendance in April live and in person, the North Reading Board of Selectmen has voted 4-1 to reaffirm its policy of televising Town Meeting on a one-day tape delay.

Although Selectman Chair Gerald Venezia voted to broadcast live because he's had several people ask him why the meetings can't be televised, the rest of the committee reiterated previous delaying tactics, i.e. arguments relating to encouraging attendance and discouraging special interest voting.

According to the "North Reading Transcript," discussion about the not-so-instant replay was live-ly and saw School Committee Chair Colleen Dolan present Selectmen with statistics dating back to 1986, showing that attendance "didn't increase" when committee broadcasts were delayed.

Although the School Committee favors live broadcast, Selectman William Bellino interpreted the statistics to mean that attendance can be "very fickle."

At first Bellino wanted broadcasts to be delayed by one week but revised that to one day at the urging of other board and audience members.

Kids Who Smoke

sure, especially with older kids, parents who smoke, and marketing. Kids get the wrong message when they see smoking portrayed as glamorous."

Conley said those three factors lead to experimentation. After that point, he said, it only takes about two or three months to become addicted to nicotine. "It's a very powerful drug. People who quit experience the same withdrawal effects as people quitting cocaine. It's that powerful."

Deborah Allen, a Unit Director for the American Cancer Society, agreed with Conley's assessment, but stressed that marketing is perhaps the most dangerous factor.

"A lot of things are targeted at children and we don't know about them," Allen said. "Many cigarette displays in stores only come up to an adult's thigh, but they're eye level for kids. They also offer t-shirt giveaways."

Allen said one particular brand of cigarette portrays a cartoon camel on its packages. "They show a group of camels hanging out, having fun. It's supposed to show that they're cool. And why are they cartoons? A lot of times, the messages are subliminal."

Both Conley and Allen said that education is the best method for preventing children from smoking. "Education is really the only way we can fight it," said Allen. The ACS is sponsoring a "Smoke Free Class of 2000," added Allen. The kids in the program are taught the dangers of tobacco from early on and will try to graduate smoke free in the year 2000.

Two major stumbling blocks in the fight to keep kids from smoking are the easy access of cigarettes in stores and from machines, in combination with the lack of enforcement of smoking laws. By law, no one under the age of 18 is allowed to buy any sort of tobacco product.

However, that law is not held in high regard by kids and merchants alike. Also by law, all stores that sell tobacco products are required to post the law in clear sight of the customer. Conley said several sting operations to catch violators have been effective in Springfield and Somerville, but the infractions persist.

One parent in Wilmington "took the law into his own hands," so to speak. The man noticed his 16-year-old son emerging from a convenience store three weeks ago with a cigarette perched between his lips.

Angered, both with his son and with the person behind the counter who made the sale, the man walked over to the store and took action. "I grabbed (my son) by the ear and brought him back inside." Once inside, he asked the sales clerk to call the police, which he did.

The police arrived and later reported that the sales clerk admitted that he did not think the boy looked old enough. The kid had told the clerk he was buying the cigarettes for his mother waiting in the parking lot.

"It's just the same as liquor," the man said. "If mom wants it, she can come in and get it. If the kid came in and said he wanted a fifth of scotch for his mother, you wouldn't sell it to him."

The Wilmington man said he was concerned for his son's health, as he suffers from asthma. "I yelled at him too, but you can only do that so much. If he chooses to die, what are you going to do. He's pretty much killing himself."

For the clerk's infraction of the law, the store owner was fined $300 by the Wilmington Board of Health. A town bylaw, passed just last year, allows the Health Agent to levy such fines.

Most agree that education and enforcement will produce desired results. But the fact that cigarettes do not strike fear in people's minds the way liquor and hard drugs do, will not make it an easy battle. While schools have smoking policies and often levy suspensions, smoking still exists, as do state laws, but some have little regard for them.

As for costs, smoking related diseases and treatments take a toll on the national economy, to the tune of about $65 billion per year. Every pack of cigarettes sold costs taxpayers $2.17 in treatment and lost productivity, according to the ACS.

However, some would argue that smoking is a form of free speech, and that the right to do so should not be questioned, by anyone.

As the school bell rings, our group of young ladies prepare to head home for the day, and their conversation comes to a conclusion.

"When I'm mad, the first thing I do is light up," said the 15-year-old. "I always have a cigarette after I eat. I bite my nails when I don't have a cigarette."

Jimmy Quinno wanted to lose weight. The doctor gave him a jar containing 1,000 pills. "Holy smokes!" Jimmy shouted, "How many pills do I take a day?" The doctor smiled and said, "None. You spread them out on the floor every morning and pick them up one at a time and put them back in the jar." In two weeks Jimmy lost fifty "pills"-- some rolled under the refrigerator and some under the stove.

Al Pymm has two beautiful teenage daughters. When the telephone rang, he answered it. He listened for a moment then said, "No, I'm not Dreamboat. I'm more like the Supply Ship!"...When his first son was born, Pat Regan called his mother up saying, "Congratulations, Ma, you have just become a babysitter!"

I just knew we were going to have a "blockbuster" of a snow storm when the radio storm center announced that the Humpty Dumpty Schools cancelled classes...A Woburn school teacher asked her class, "Name one thing that we have today that we didn't have 50 years ago." Joseph Altavesta raised his hand and shouted, "Me, teacher."

My sister Maureen's little boy has a habit of picking boxes of candy, cookies and jelly beans off the shelves in the super market when they go shopping. She devised a simple solution to that problem. As soon as she enters the store, she reaches down and pulls little Tommy's trouser belt off and that keeps the little feller busy holding his pants up so he doesn't touch anything on the store's shelves.

A man was crossing the street when he was hit by a car. Bob Bonney rushed over to where he was lying down and asked, "Are you badly hurt, sir?" The man opened one eye and replied, "How the heck do I know, I'm a doctor not a lawyer!"...Roseanne Barr's singing of the Star Spangled Banner caused more drunks than patriots...My Aunt Nora knows that she is getting old. The candles cost more than her birthday cake...Dennis Tully told his girlfriend, "Tonight dear, you're going to dine royally. She did. Dennis took her to the Burger King and later the the Dairy Queen.

I love comical signs -- like a sign on an Auto Body Shop, "Pardon me, may we have your next 'dents'?"...Folks, if you love your children "Belt" them (in the car).

Las Vegas is great but Reno is better. It's where you can get rid of your money and your wife or husband in the same day...Experience teaches us not to lend money to relatives and strangers - it causes amnesia...

Some politicians didn't invent crime - they just improved on it.

I spoke at the Elks luncheon last week. I asked Bobby Burns, "How did my speech and jokes go over with the members?" Bobby smiled and said, "Didn't you hear the booing?" "Yes," I replied, "but, I heard some clapping, too." "Chipper," Bobby said, "that applause wasn't for you; it was for those doing the booing!"...A Hollywood romance and marriage goes something like this - First, it's "I do." Then it's "Adieu." Finally, it's "I'll sue!"

Apprentice barber Mario DiMino nicked Paul Simon (his first customer) more than a dozen times. Mario asked, "Sir, do you want your head wrapped in a towel?" "Yes," Paul replied, "and I'll carry it home under my arm."...Have you seen the "Dancing Raisins" commercial on television? Well, there's one for senior citizens like me - it's the "Dancing Prunes."...It's very rare to see a bakery go bankrupt - maybe it's because they have plenty of "dough."

Valentine's Day was one of the busiest days of the year for the "Johnson Roses Company" according to Tim Began and Dave Bunker. The best compliment an Irish lad can give a Colleen in Ireland is to say, "Come into my garden. I want the roses to see you."...My wife, Kathy, has an "hour glass" figure but the sand has all gone to the bottom.

"The Shamrock" - In the Emerald Hills of Ireland, On the river banks so grand, St. Patrick spread the Christian Faith and sowed the seed of Love not hate. From fields he picked a wee Shamrock, then held it high above his flock. "Three leaves, one stem - a mystery but, from it learn the Trinity." A clover in a field of green, tells me more than any theme. They grow and thrive near Galway Bay where a bit of Heaven fell one day. "Erin Go Bragh." Happy St. Patrick's Day to all.....

MALDEN VOTES SUMMER SCHOOL INCREASE

Although the Summer School Administration felt fees per course should remain at $90 for both residents and non-residents, the Malden School Committee has voted a 39 percent increase in summer school course tuition for Malden residents and a 67 percent increase for non-residents.

The cost per course is now $125 for residents, $150 for non-residents.

According to the "Malden Daily News - Medford Mercury," School Committee member Steven Braveman requested the increase because he felt 1) the previous fee was so low that some students weren't working hard enough to pass during a normal school year; and 2) the program for the previous summer was $6,500 in the red, not including air conditioning expenses at the high school which cost the School Department $1,000 per day or between $60,000 and $70,000 for the summer.

Of the 265 students enrolled in the summer program last year, 57 percent were from Malden and most of the others were from Melrose, Everett and Revere, the latter two having dropped their summer school programs.

Typically, 85 to 90 percent of those enrolled in Malden's summer school pass their courses; and the last tuition increase - from $70 to $90 or 29 percent - occurred several years ago.

READING SUMMER SCHOOL NEEDS TEACHERS - New Reading Summer School Director John Doherty is in the process of receiving and reviewing applications from those teachers in and out of the Reading School System who are interested in teaching and designing enrichment courses.

At this point, summer school is unofficially scheduled to begin on Tuesday, July 6th. Because Reading has had three snow days so far, there has been no official word yet on the date of the last day of school. For up-to-date information, contact Doherty at Reading's Coolidge Middle School, (617) 942-9158.

In real life, he heads the Coolidge science department.

SEEM WORKSHOP INVOLVES LYNNFIELD, NORTH READING, WILMINGTON, WINCHESTER, BURLINGTON, ET AL. - Teams from each of seven school systems participated recently in an all-day workshop at SEEM headquarters in North Reading on "Eligibility Guidelines for Special Education."

Each team consisted of an elementary school principal, teachers, a special education director, specialists, and a parent. Workshop trainers were Priscilla O. McPhee and Debra McKee of the Massachusetts Department of Education and Alec Peck of Boston College's Special Education Department.

After considering what special education is and whom it serves, the 42 participants used case studies to determine whether or not a child is eligible for special education programs

Child abuse calls jump 38%

"I have a pot of water boiling on the stove and I'm going to drop my baby in if he doesn't stop crying," a frustrated mother recently told a telephone counselor at the Childhelp IOF Foresters Hotline.

The Hotline staffer kept her on the line for hours, calmed her down, made sure the baby was safe, and found her professional and services in the public schools. The key features of the eligibility guidelines reviewed were pre-referral and assessment processes, modification of curriculum and instruction, and cultural - linguistic considerations.

Participating teams were given materials to design local school implementation plans and will meet again in the spring for an intensive five-day skill-building seminar for select school systems.

"Because regional offices of education have been disbanded, the State Department of Education recognizes educational collaboratives like SEEM as effective, already available vehicles for providing training workshops for public school people," says SEEM Director Bob Lyons.

For more information, contact Lyons at (508) 664-5791 or (617) 944-4733.

help. Cries for help like these from victims of child abuse skyrocketed during 1992, according to the Childhelp IOF Foresters Hotline (1-800-4-A-Child), the nation's largest child abuse prevention hotline.

Hotline statistics released today show a phenomenal 38 percent overall increase in calls received in 1992, for a total of 360,050 calls. The majority of the calls were to report sexual abuse, with physical abuse being second, followed by emotional abuse and neglect.

"I think the increase in calls reflects that our culture is allowing us to acknowledge that it's ok to talk openly about abuse," says Sue A. Meier, M.A., M.F.C.C., director of the Hotline. "Even celebrities are coming out and saying 'It happened to me.' But the increase also points to the fact that, as we experience the worst recession since the depression, people's stress levels are so much higher, hence abuse is higher."

The Childhelp IOF Foresters Hotline is the only toll-free national child abuse crisis line of its type, providing 24-hour access to counseling professionals, referral and reporting services.

The IOF Foresters, one of the world's oldest and largest family fraternal benefit societies, offers free effective parenting tips and booklets on family stress. For more information, call the IOF Foresters Better Parenting Info toll free at 1-800-922-4-IOF.

"Far Off Place"

"A Far Off Place" Starring Reese Witherspoon, Ethan Randall, Sarel Bok. Directed by Mikael Salomon. Produced by Eva Monley, Elaine Sperber. Screenplay by Robert Caswell, Jonathan Hensleigh, Sally Robinson. Based on the book's "A Story Like the Wind" and "A Far Off Place," by Laurens van der Post. Rated PG.

Swirling sands, cruel poachers and young love add up to unadulterated adventure. Well, unadulterated if you can make it across a couple of yawning holes in the plot.

Set in Zimbabwe, the story begins when 14-year-old Nonnie (Reese Witherspoon) is thrown together with Harry (Ethan Randall) the teenage son of her parents' friend. Nonnie's folks, who live in an isolated farmhouse not far from the Kalahari desert, are working to stem the flow of illegal poaching out of Africa.

The night Harry and his dad arrive for a vacation, everyone at the outpost is murdered by vengeful poachers except for the two teenagers. They are saved by Xhabbo, a bushman who is Nonnie's best friend. Xhabbo has a parapsychological ability, called "tapping," which is actually well-documented among Bushmen.

Xhabbo's "tapping" is not as far-fetched as it sounds. The film's strong point is its ability to show us the interconnectedness of nature. The children flee the poachers by crossing the desert, with the Namib filling in for the Kalahari. They survive the 1000-mile trek because of Xhabbo, who is intimately in touch with his surroundings and has a store of ancient survival skills.

As New Yorker Harry learns to trust Xhabbo and Nonnie to trust Harry, the three of them form a link strong enough to help them cross a beautiful, but brutal landscape. Director Mikael Salomon captured the swirling colors, exotic wildlife and scrubby desert plants with an uncompromising eye. The film may have other problems, but this amazing desert sequence makes up for all of them.

One of the film's biggest obstacles, however, is its violence. People are killed, animals are slaughtered, buildings are blow up. It is certainly not a bad idea for kids to learn about the evils of poaching, but all this violence is likely to be too intense for young viewers. Then again, the story is not sophisticated enough for older teens. So for a family film, the audience is rather limited.

The filmmakers clearly state that none of the animals in the film were actually harmed. Fiberglass was used to make elephant tusks and wrinkled latex models stood in for slain elephants. The filmmakers did an amazingly realistic job of recreating the animals, but explaining away all the violence doesn't exactly justify it.

On even more shaky ground is the ending. Maximilian Schell plays a big game hunter who has taken up a new career as the head of an anti-poaching squad. Supposedly experienced, he blindly takes Nonnie and Harry into what is obviously a trap. And the bad guy, who has millions of dollars in ivory at stake, also marches in without any back-up.

What was a reasonably intelligent movie loses much of its credibility at this point. We can pretty much accept this adventure, thanks to Witherspoon's believable performance and a changeable desert brought to life in front of director Salomon's camera. You'll just have to shake the ending out of your mind, as there is still a lot to like about "A Far Off Place."

Swing Kids takes a piece of history about rebellious German teens and trivializes. The Hitler Youth comes between two cool cats, one who believes the propaganda and the other who jitters in defiance. Dancing doesn't make for much of a rebellion, but then this isn't much of a film. It's so inane that Kenneth Branagh, who plays a Gestapo big wig, took his name off the film. Rated PG-13. *1/2

Short Takes

Falling Down is a nasty and controversial tale of white urban anger in which nerdy Michael Douglas stomps on anyone who annoys him. He may right a few wrongs along the way, but much of his venom is dipped in paranoia and racism. An ugly, ugly film. Rated R. *

Mad Dog and Glory teams mild mannered cop Robert De Niro with complicated gangster/comedian Bill Murray. Uma Thurman is the woman who Murray tosses to De Niro, then wants back. Characterization and very strong performances are the film's best points. The plot is uneven, but still manages to charm. Rated R. ***

Army of Darkness is a funky, funny Sam Raimi ("Darkman") concoction in which dumb hunk Bruce Campbell falls into a time warp and emerges in the 13th Century. There he uses his chainsaw and agility to fight an army of Deadites that looks like it marched right out of a 1950's matinee. Goofy, but fun. Rated R.  1/2

The Crying Game is a twisting, turning action romance that defies conventional movie mores. What begins as a movie about IRA terrorists takes you on a journey that flows seamlessly from one genre into another, surprising and delighting along the way. There's good reason people are chattering about this film, as audiences are seldom treated to such originality. Rated R. ****

Unnamed Heart is an appealing old-fashioned sudser of a romance given lots of conviction by waitress Maria Tomei and the busboy she falls for (Christian Slater). Rosie Perez is the comic relief in this girl meets boy story. The dialogue sometimes sounds a little scripted, but the performances really pull at your heartstrings. Rated PG-13. ***

Sommersby is an emotionally rich and eye-pleasing Civil War romance in which plantation owner Richard Gere returns to his wife Jodie Foster a changed man. In fact, he may not even be the same man. Powerful, sweeping and memorable, this is a throw back to Hollywood's epic past and shouldn't be missed. Rated PG-13. ****

Scent of a Woman gives Al Pacino a chance to knock our socks off as a blind army veteran who hires an unwilling prep school student (BC student Chris O'Donnell) to guide him around New York City for one wild weekend. The story unfolds in typical Hollywood fashion, but go to see Pacino's performance, you won't be disappointed. His fine acting and some clever language save it from being too precious. Rated R. ***

A Few Good Men is a powerful drama set in a military courtroom starring Tom Cruise, Demi Moore and Jack Nicholson. In spite of rather uneven pacing, this movie is packed with strong performances and a dynamite ending. It also manages to sidestep numerous stereotypes as it builds layered and believable characters. Rated R.  1/2

Audubon sponsored Mass turtle symposium

More than 80 percent of the turtles found on land or sea in Massachusetts are endangered. On Saturday and Sunday, March 20-21, Massachusetts Audubon will present a Symposium on the Status and Conservation of Turtles of the Northeast at Worcester State College. The event will be hosted by Dr. Terry Graham of Worcester State College.

Field biologists, state officials and conservationists will gather at the two-day conference to update each other and interested citizens about current populations and research on the 15 native species of turtles found in the northeast.

"This conference is for anyone who has ever worried about a turtle crossing the road or wanted to save a backyard wetland," said Tom Tynning, Massachusetts Audubon's amphibian and reptile expert and organizer of the conference. "Most people enjoy watching turtles, and most turtles stay within a small area during their 100-year lives. That means we can carry out local conservation strategies to protect them."

Featured speakers include Dr. Carl Ernst of George Mason University on Saturday at 1:15 p.m. who will present an overview of United States turtles. Dr. Michael Klemens of the American Museum of Natural History will speak on rare turtles of New England on Sunday at 9:35 a.m.

Experts will present 22 additional reports on everything from turtle tracking to taxonomy, from mapping turtle ranges to the turtle trade. Each report is geared toward protecting turtles and their habitat and sharing success stories and related research.

"Turtles have been on earth longer than almost any other backboneed animal," added Tynning. "They watched the dinosaurs come and go, and only in the last 100 years have their numbers begun to decline. We need to get together to find ways to protect them."

The registration fee of $10 covers presentations and exhibits on both Saturday and Sunday and includes a box lunch on Saturday. An optional $15 banquet is scheduled for Saturday evening featuring the artwork of and an illustrated presentation by David Carroll, author of The Year of the Turtle.

Walk-in registrants are welcome. For more information or to register for the turtle conference, contact the Education Department at Massachusetts Audubon Society, (617) 259-9500, Ext. 7251.

Exhibitors will be members of the Stoneham Chamber of Commerce and special events will include Workshops on "Substance Abuse in the Workplace," "What Automating Can/Can't do for Your Business," "Benefits of Promoting Health in the Workplace," and "Should I Incorporate?" The Town of Stoneham, Small Business Administration, SCORE and Department of Employment and Training will all be represented, as well as the health insurance companies that provide Chamber of Commerce members with group coverage.

The Expo is open to the public and admission is free. It will provide an opportunity for consumers to examine the local market and for exhibitors to increase visibility and showcase their businesses. Expo hours are 11 am until 5 pm, followed by an After Hours Social/Business Card Exchange until 7 pm.

The Board of Directors and membership are working together to ensure a successful exposition. Participation has exceeded original goals with upwards of 50 exhibitors now reserved. Donations and sponsorships have been most generous. Action Ambulance Service Inc., Continental Cablevision, Cummings Properties, JFL Marketing & Advertising and Massachusetts Business Development Corporation are sponsors. American Speedy Printing Center donated printing services and the Stoneham Independent will oversee an extensive promotional campaign. At Museum of Science

Educational Software Fair

Journey with Isaac Asimov to witness landmark science discoveries, fly around the world and watch day turn into night, publish your own book and create original combinations of lyrics and music. These experiences and many more can be had at the Educational Software Fair at the Museum of Science March 19-21.

Geared to families and teachers, the Educational Software Fair gives both high tech enthusiasts and the computer-shy an opportunity to test drive innovative new educational tools and learn what to look for in a software package. More than 100 computer terminals will be on line with cutting edge educational programs from 22 software manufacturers. Visitors are encouraged to experiment in an interactive learning atmosphere with no pressure to buy.

"For many people, there is a lack of information available when it comes to making decisions about educational software," said Museum of Science President and Director David Ellis. "By inviting the public to experiment with some of the leading programs in one place without sales pressure, we hope to address that need and introduce these innovative teaching tools to a wider audience."

Visitors can sample software programs appropriate for children ages three to seventeen. Some of the current most popular programs will be on-line, including Broderbund's "Where in the World is Carmen Sandiego?", WGBH's "NOVA Science Adventures," Toucan Software's "Big Book Maker," Optimum Resources' "Sticky-bear Software" and others.

The weekend will also feature demonstrations every half-hour

Wakefield Repertory Theatre 60's dance in Wakefield

The Wakefield Repertory Theatre is holding its first "60's Dance" on Saturday, March 27 at the Americal Civic Center on Main Street in Wakefield. The dance will be held from 8 p.m. to midnight.

This is the first fundraiser of this kind for the WRT, whose last theatrical production was the hugely successful My Fair Lady this past January. Featured at this "60's Dance" will be "Class of '66," headed by Wakefield's Sam Donato, who many undoubtedly remember as Alfie Doolittle in My Fair Lady and as the Innkeeper in last year's Man of Lamancha. "Class of '66" performs some of the best music of the 60s and is one of the most talented bands in New England.

There will be a 60's theme throughout the evening, and everyone attending is encouraged to wear his or her favorite 60's garb - whether it be a resurrected pair of old hip-hugger bell-bottoms with love beads and a headband, or a reasonable facsimile from the 90's. And while a costume is certainly not mandatory, prizes will be awarded for the most authentic ones. The evening is sure to be packed with music and fun for all involved. Proceeds from this dance will go toward WRT's summer productions of Fifth of July and the children's musical Alice in Wonderland. Tickets for the dance are $10, and no one under the age of 21 will be admitted without a positive ID. There will be a cash bar available. For more information or for advance ticket sales, call (617) 246-6324, Ext. 397.

Bluegrass group in Burlington

Doors open at 7:30 p.m.. Tickets are $10 each and are available at the door. For more information call (508) 264-0668 or (617) 891-0258.
